VARIOUS NOISES night be... last, yesterday headaches, ..., and a little reflection by ...e wise. The new year, with ...rity for those that really ...rk, or about one in 100 will ... begin until Monday.

CROWDS LOOK at moving ...ures of savages beating tom-...s in the darkness of the ...de and say "interesting ...gery." Later they blow tin ...s, pull corks from bottles of ...nous whisky, sit up all ...t on New Year's Eve and ...that "civilization."

...new year begins with the ...dent news, namely that the ... of infantile paralysis has ...isolated, can be studied, ...ted to experiments, and ...ease perhaps brought un-...ntrol, as has been done ...smallpox, diphtheria and ...diseases.

...AOUS LEADERS tell what ...think, or wish. Inukai, ...ni of Japan, wishes peace ...Jan and China. He be...es bringing "the Chinese ...hanese people closer to-...r, and is bringing them ...A present.

PRESIDENT HOOVER says ...he sat thing for 1932 is ...ourage. Keeping up courage ...nd American methods abroad ...nd at home, with confidence ...n our institutions, will do ...much to promote economic re-...overy and international friend-...hip."

GERMANY'S FINANCE min-...er, ...trich, says Germany ...ll not refuse to pay private ...ts, which is pleasing to ...Americ finance. His qualify-...g promise, "to do all possible ...o pay e interest on them and ...o refund them," is not so ...easing.

Nothing is said to comfort Uncle Sam by any European ...ation. There is an idea that ...he doesn't need money or ought ...ot to it it.

THE NEW PRESIDENT of ...Spain sends "best wishes to the ...Americas" and says Spain, be...inning new era in democracy, ...now on travel the high road ...o progress with their brothers ...n the Americas."

He will find the high road a ...ittle rugh here, but getting ...smoother.

ADMIRABLE IS the simple ...strong style" employed by ...Hindenburg addressing Ger...many, by radio:

"Men and women of Germany: By office as president, the fact that I am old and have witnessed a long period of German history, give me the right to say a few words at the end of a year of destiny."

The German nation will ...gratefully retain, as long as he ...can work, such a man as Hin...denburg, who says, with true ...sincerity:

"From the bottom of my heart I wish all of the German people a happy and blessed new year."

There is a real man, a loyal man.

ANNUAL AUTOMOBILE ex...positions will soon open. Do not ...miss the nearest one. You will ...see amazing proofs of industrial ...efficiency, with values, wearing ...quality and beauty, unprece...dented.

The determination "not to ...buy a car this year" will hardly ...survive the inspection of new ...models.

CRIME AND gangdom in New ...York develop names and slang ...that would delight Eugene Sue. ...Crooked Neck" Levine, mur...dered in New York two days ago ...because he was winning too ...many poker chips, was found ...with many bullets at a social ...and fraternal gathering place ...known as the "Pup's Kennel ...Yard" on the ground floor of a ...New York hotel.

A Christmas tree in the "pup's ...tunnel" was upset, in the rush ...of 50 gamblers, when three ...gunmen "appearing from now ...here" pumped bullets into the ...head of "Crooked Neck" Levine. ...Levine's own gun was of the ...right sort, automatic, "filled ...with dum-dum bullets" that ...spread out when they hit. He ...had no chance to use it.

SPEAKER GARNER says the ...Democratic House of Repre...sentatives will put tariff ahead ...of taxation, and attack tariff ...problems right after the holi...days.

"If we cut tariffs Europe will ...rejoice. If we imitate Europe, ...we shall make the tariff wall ...higher.

"A House of Representatives, ...probably Democratic, working be...fore a Senate feebly Republican, ...may give feeble results.

GANDHI SAYS all hope of ...agreement with Britain is past, ...orders a resumption of dis...obedience, with a boycott on the ...British, picketing shops, break...ing laws and asks everybody to ...pray.

The British, who do not be...lieve that the Hindu gods are ...real ones, will not mind the ...praying, but the boycott is hard ...on British cotton factories.

PLANS FOR warring against ...Mussolini's supporters in the ...United States are extensive, ...after the killing of two post...office employes by bombs in...tended for Italian-Americans ...who approve Mussolini, six ...other bombs were discovered in ...four cities. The police, explod...ing the bombs, say they were ...powerful enough "to wreck half ...a block."

If the national government, ...which has an efficient official ...secret service, will probably ...believe itself powerful enough to ...suppress this Italian political war ...on American soil.

ARMY, NAVY SIGN GRID TRUCE

Teams Will Meet Next Fall; Annapolis Drops Fight To Limit Playing Years

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Officials of the Military and Naval Academies have reached a satisfactory agreement on questions which resulted in a break in athletic relations in 1927 and will resume their annual football game next fall on a regular basis.

All matters were threshed out at meetings in New York this week between athletic heads of the two service schools and, although the Naval delegation did not have authority to sign contracts, that matter is expected to be attended to shortly.

DETAILS SHIELDED

Exact details were not learned, but it was understood Navy had abandoned its position that Army must abide by collegiate rules limiting a football player to only three years of college competition. The original break came over Navy's demand that this rule be put in effect at West Point. Army authorities always have held that so long as a player is a Cadet in good standing at the military academy he is eligible for intercollegiate athletic competition even if he has played three years of college football before entering the academy.

The two service schools have met at football the last two years

GARAGE BANDITS CHAIN VICTIM

Four men bound Raymond Brown, Negro, attendant, to an automobile with a tire chain in the Uptown Garage at Colwell and Vine streets early today, then ransacked every car in the garage. They escaped in their own car with what police were told were bundles of drygoods taken from one of the machines.

Because Earl Anderson, of 636 Elm way, Oakmont, noted by the light of a passing automobile the license number of a machine which bore three armed, masked men as they held up and robbed him and Florence Booker, of 411 California avenue, Oakmont, of a small amount of money and jewelry on the Logan's Ferry hill, the alleged bandits were held today in the county jail.

After the robbery, Anderson telephoned New Kensington police and the suspects were arrested. They gave their names as Louis Clegg, 21, of New Kensington, R. F. D. No. 3; William Dempe, 21, of House No. 3, North Bessemer, and Tony Washlaski, 20, of Harmarville, according to police.

Two armed men held up and robbed John C. Renner, 22, of 232 Braddock avenue, Swissvale, of $10 as he walked in Edgewood avenue, Edgewood, early today, it was reported to police.

S. A. Nichols, of 129 East Kennedy avenue, after leaving the Allegheny Elks Club, was held up at Park avenue and East Diamond street, North Side, early today by three men, who robbed him of a $100 watch and $4 in cash.

Prosperous New Year Rockefeller Wish

ORMOND, Fla., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., followed his usual daily routine on this first day of the new year. He played his customary round of golf and walked about the beautiful gardens of the Casements, his winter home here. For his golfing partners he had a wish for a "prosperous new year." He did not give interviews.

TOKIO ARMY CAPTURES CHINCHOW

Japanese Seize Last Great City in Manchuria; Find Few Chinese Soldiers

By EDWARD HUNTER
International News Service.

MUKDEN, Jan. 2. — The long-heralded Japanese capture of Chinchow was effected today, although occupation of the last Chinese stronghold in Manchuria by Japanese troops actually was an anti-climax to the extensive operations which preceded it.

When an armored trainload of troops and a detachment of cavalry from the Kamura brigade entered the high walls of Chinchow, they found it almost completely deserted of Chinese soldiers, who had been fleeing helter-skelter for three days. "here was virtually no fighting.

Although comparativly few Japanese troops occupied the city, they were backed by well-groomed thousands who were advancing behind them and were ready to strike immediately if there had been the least sign of resistence.

The main body of Gen. Jiro Tamon's army marching down the Peiping-Mukden Railway from the north was to enter the city later in the day, while other units were equally near.

FIREMEN IN THE RUINS OF THE ORLANDO FRUIT STORE, FIFTH AVENUE, M'KEESPORT . . . . . GAS BLEW IT TO BITS TODAY

FIND PARCEL IN ARONSON BUILDING

Harmless Violet Ray Machine Revealed by Police After Sleuths' Futile Gunfire

Postal inspectors and city detectives were rushed to the Aronson Building, Fifth avenue, today, to investigate what the proprietress of the La Salle Beauty Salon feared was an attempted bombing.

City detectives took the package to a parking lot behind Central Police Station, fired eight shots into it and then opened it.

It was an ancient violet-ray machine.

A note in it, signed by W. B. Jones, of 91 Strauss street, read:

"Dear Madame: — I hope you can make some use of the few things you find herein as this is my small way of wishing you a very happy New Year.

"I had some other things but seemingly they are hard to locate at present.

"I bid you Godspeed."

Viola Farrish, a worker in the beauty parlor, found the supposed bomb, a square leather case wrapped in brown paper, on a table in the waiting room. She called Mrs. W. E. Graves, a Negro woman, the proprietress, who found the package weighed almost six pounds. Recalling recent bombings of which she had read in the newspapers, Mrs. Graves called police and the postal authorities.

The package carried 12 cents' worth of uncanceled postage stamps.

According to an elevator man in the building, which is located in the heart of the downtown district, it was taken to the beauty parlor by a young foreigner, who asked his way to the beauty parlor when he stepped on the elevator.

BELATED COLD SIEGE NEAR

Rain and spring-like temperatures will give way to snow flurries tonight and tomorrow, with a low mark tonight of around 28, the Weather Bureau predicts.

Despite the drop in the mercury, no severe cold is probable, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said. New Year's Day was milder than the green Christmas, with showers and sunshine alternating.

The rivers registered 13.8 feet at the Point this morning and will go about a foot higher, Brotzman predicted. Rain here since yesterday morning totaled 1.46 inches.

Hearst Radio Speech Stirs Wide Interest

Stations Drop Usual Programs for Talk On Next President

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2.—A nation-wide interest has been aroused by the announcement that William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, will speak tonight on a nation-wide radio hookup, on the subject, "Who Will Be the Next President?"

Additional stations today had canceled commercial programs to join the transcontinental network originally arranged for the publisher's address, Los Angeles, seldom a point of origin for extensive network broadcasts, becomes the key city of 50 stations, a record number of outlets, during the Hearst broadcast, from 7:15 to 7:30, Eastern standard time.

An emergency circuit will be in readiness to carry the broadcast should storms in the West interfere. The National Broadcasting Company takes this precaution on all notable programs.

It will be carried to foreign countries by short wave.

Foreign news services, because of the importance with which Mr. Hearst's opinion on American and foreign affairs are regarded abroad, have arranged for his speech to be cabled to them in its entirety immediately after he speaks.

The broadcast by Mr. Hearst will be heard by listeners in this territory through Station WCAE at 7:15 p. m.

BLASTS WRECK 2 BUILDINGS

McKeesport police today were investigating two explosions—one a bombing—that occurred in the same block in Fifth avenue within 24 hours.

While the officers were probing the bombing of Russell Stauch's barber shop, 702 Fifth avenue, a gas blast early today wrecked the three-story building across the street at 709 Fifth avenue, occupied by Stephen Orlando's fruit store and the family of Julius Paul.

At 5 a. m. yesterday a bomb exploded in Stauch's barber shop, damaging the interior and blowing the windows and doors from the front of the building, police said. Damage was estimated at $300 by McKeesport police.

LATEST BOMB PLOTS FOILED

Associated Press.

Federal and local authorities in many cities worked today to end the bomb menace which has spread through the East and Middlewest.

Since Wednesday, when the first of the infernal machines exploded in the postoffice at Easton, Pa., causing the death of three persons, at least a dozen bombs have been sent by mail or express and intercepted by authorities. Most of the missiles were intended for Italian consuls or others identified with the Fascist movement.

Fourteen places in Chicago, homes and business houses of prominent Italian-American citizens, were under guard.

Doctor's Will Orders Wilson Illness Record Burned

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2. —(AP.)—Carrying out the highest ideals of the ethics of his profession, Dr. Francis X. Dercum, noted neurologist of this city, in his will ordered destroyed the private case records of his patients, including those of President Woodrow Wilson.

Dr. Dercum, who died last April, had among his patients many notable persons from various parts of the world. He considered the records of so confidential a nature that they should never be permitted to be seen, even by other physicians, his widow explained, and should be burned.

He was among specialists called into consultation during the President's last illness. The attention which this call focused upon him proved annoying to Dr. Dercum. He felt that public interest should be greater in scientific investigations in which he was interested and which sometimes went unnoticed.

Dr. Dercum's will became public yesterday. His widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Comly Dercum, had the provision for destruction of the private records carried out. His entire estate of $363,531 was left to Mrs. Dercum.

BRITISH PONDER GANDHI TRUCE

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 2.—(AP)—There were indications today that a truce might be reached by Mahatma Gandhi and the British government in India to avert resumption of the civil disobedience campaign.

Powerful influences were at work to persuade Viceroy Lord Willingdon to receive Mr. Gandhi without placing any restrictions upon the matters to be discussed. Heretofore the viceroy has insisted that he will not permit discussion of the recently-enacted provincial ordinances extending the power of local authorities to deal with political disorders.

Many telegrams have been sent to Lord Willingdon by business interests which feel that another nationalist campaign would precipitate a grave economic crisis, and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru was active in negotiations to prevent war.

BODY OF FLIER STILL UNFOUND

ELKINS, W. Va., Jan. 2.—(INS)—Hope of finding Lieut. E. H. Bobbitt, missing Army flier, which was buoyed up by persistent rumors that his body and crashed plane were found, sank today when the rumors were found false.

After an all-night search by woodsmen, the reports that Bobbitt was found on the west side of East Mountain in an isolated wilderness near Sully, in Pendleton County, were proved unfounded.

All hope of finding the missing flier alive has been abandoned. The search has settled to a routine but dogged hunt for the body and his crash plane. Snow hampers land searching parties in the mountains and the undergrowth is so thick that it would be possible for the hunters to pass within 25 feet of Bobbitt's body without detecting it.

ARMY AND NAVY SIGN TRUCE

for charity. Army winning in 1930 by 6-0 and in 1931 by 17-7.

It has been freely predicted for some time that the good feelings engendered by these two meetings would lead to a resumption of relations.

STRAW VOTES

Recent straw votes among graduates of the two schools have shown which way the wind was blowing. The Navy Graduates Association of New York voted overwhelmingly for a resumption of football relations under any terms.

In the 1930 football game there were evidences that some feeling still existed between the two schools, several of the traditions of Army-Navy meetings being lacking, but the game last month was true to all the old standards. At the conclusion of the game the Cadet Corps swarmed across the field and hurled jibes and caps at the Naval regiment as of old.

The game is slated to be played at the Yankee Stadium, New York, December 3, a date held open by both schools in anticipation of an agreement. The Navy also held November 26 open as a possible date for the classic, but Army has scheduled Notre Dame for that date.

Maj. Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of West Point athletics, who has had much to do with healing the breach with Navy, has had his assignment extended to cover the period of reconciliation.

His present first assistant, Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones, who was head coach of Army football at the time of the break in 1927, is understood to be considering an offer to become head football coach at Louisiana State University.

Boy Kills Father 'To Save Mother'

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Anthony Colatti, Jr., 13, police said, ended a quarrel between his parents yesterday by shooting and killing his father. The boy said:

"I did it to save mother."

Fifteen guests at a New Year's party at the Colatti home were questioned. They said Mr. and Mrs. Colatti were in the midst of a verbal war when the boy pushed between them and fired a revolver.

MILLIONS MADE ON FOREIGN LOANS

Bankers Reap Fat Profits, Investors Lose Heavily, Senate Inquiry Reveals

By EDWARD L. RODDAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—An amazing picture of fat profits to international bankers and heavy losses to American investors through the dumping of billions of foreign bonds in this country was revealed today by the Senate Finance Committee.

In a supplemental report made public in connection with the far-flung investigation sponsored by Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, these astounding developments were:

1—American investors and small banks are holding $815,471,800 of South American bonds which defaulted during 1931.

2—Three international banking firms have made profits of over $100,000,000 in the sale of foreign securities in the United States.

3—The total of these securities sold to the American public since the war is over $4,000,000,000.

The startling figures regarding the numerous defaulting in South American securities were made public through additional testimony submitted to the committee by Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb and Co.

The $815,471,800 represents the aggregate amounts outstanding on 56 different South American issues which defaulted interest payments during the year 1931. The total is far in excess of prior estimates.

In addition to the Kuhn, Loeb data, a great mass of additional evidence was submitted to the committee by the banking firms of J. P. Morgan & Co., and the National City Bank of New York. Witnesses for these firms testified orally at hearings before the Christmas recess.

The new data will be used extensively when the investigation resumes Monday. The probe was sponsored by Senator Hiram Johnson (Rep.), of California, to throw some light on the billions of foreign securities unloaded upon the American investing public by the international bankers.

MINE STRIKE'S SCOPE IN DOUBT

HARLAN, Ky., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—With operators claiming very few men quit work, and union leaders saying they had not yet received complete reports, the effect of a National Miners Union strike call was in doubt today.

The strike was called to begin January 1, ordinarily a holiday in the Southeastern Kentucky coal fields, but many mines operated as a means of testing the union strength.

Workers at four mines in Knox County struck, and walkouts occurred at Two Bell County operations. Pickets induced employes of one Harlan County mine to quit, and scattering refusals to work were reported in other parts of the three counties.

The coal operators expressed confidence all miners who quit would return to work Monday, after they had learned the strike was not a success in the field generally.

2 Safe Cracking Jobs Net Yeggs Thirty Cents

Safecrackers were in the doldrums today, the opening of the 1932 campaign having proved ... better times are hardly around the corner.

In two jobs which they chose to usher in the new year, the yeggs collected the sum total of —well, at the Crew-Levick gasoline station, 32 East Carson street, they hammered away for hours at the strong box, gave up in disgust, took 15 cents from a cash drawer and stormed out.

But in the West End Building and Loan Association's quarters at 1318 Crafton boulevard, they did crack the safe. And they collected 15 cents.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. — To the general public, the new year holds out the hope that better times really are just around the corner. To the politicians, from President Hoover on down, the only prospect of 1932 is trouble and plenty of it.

For, at the turn of this year, the great quadrennial campaign begins in deadly earnest. The thoughts of the politicians, including the President, one-third of the Senate, and all 435 members of the House, are anxiously focused on re-election.

Armed Marshal Holds Town Against Mayor-Elect

CLEVELAND, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Armed with a sawed-off shotgun, four pistols, tear gas bombs and a baseball bat, Marshall Tom Glassburner and four deputies sat in the village hall of Miles Heights today ready to capitulate only on court orders.

The five deputies held possession since New Year's Eve, refusing admittance to Mayor-elect Alfred Bradley.

The trouble started Tuesday when the County Commissioners voted to annex the village to Cleveland. Bradley maintains that it takes 60 days to complete annexation and that he is entitled to enter office.

Glassburner moved his arsenal in, however, on instructions of the city council not to give Bradley the municipal records. And there he intended to sit, with his feet on the council table, until the courts settle the matter.

GRETA GARBO TRICKED INTO FIRST NEW YORK INTERVIEW

REPORTER AIDS IN GIVING STAR SHAMPOO

Elusive Actress Talks to Newspaperwoman Posing As Hairdresser's Helper

Greta Garbo, glamorous Swedish star, has been in New York for a fortnight traveling under the name of "Gussie Berger."

Miss Garbo has defied reporters to interview her. She refused to admit her identity and even her Hollywood friends insisted that the "Gussie Berger in New York could not have been Miss Garbo as she was still on the coast.

The great Garbo finally admitted her identity but refused to grant interviews. Miss Dorothy Ducas, staff correspondent of International News Service by a clever reportorial trick, obtained the following exclusive story by posing as an assistant to the hairdresser who shampooed Garbo's blonde tresses.

By DOROTHY DUCAS

International News Service.
(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(INS.)—Dear Greta Garbo:—You must be sincere about not wanting your picture in the papers, not craving adulation and attention. Even in private you shun being conspicuous. You act like a regular human being, a simple-hearted, sweet-natured person, when you haven't the slightest idea you are being watched.

How do I know? Well, you gave me an interview last Thursday, all unknowing. You let me gaze upon you and hear your chatter and you even smiled at me glamorously, something you have never been known to do to newspaper reporters.

NEAR ACCIDENT

Excuse me, Greta, for playing that trick on you, but you had been hiding so successfully behind goggles and skull cap and the prosaic name of Gussie Berger that something had to be done. You see, I was the nervous little hairdresser's assistant who almost spilled shampoo down your neck in Louis Parme's salon.

I had been sitting for an hour in my uniform, and by the time you came stalking in for your 3:30 appointment at 3:50 I was as nervous as a debutante. You did not look formidable, in your black skirt and white turtle-necked sweater, your black coat with its upturned collar and your black hat jammed on at the Garbo angle. But the first thing you said to me when I stood staring was:

"Close the curtains!"

TEA FOR HAIR RINSE

I thought you had guessed I was not a bona fide hairdresser's assistant, when I made that faux pas about the camomile tea. You remember, you asked for the tea while I was delivering the shampoo, and I said:

"In the shampoo?"

You looked so surprised I thought you had guessed right away that I was green at the game.

Or, maybe you don't want your public to know you have your hair rinsed in camomile tea? well, it's too late now; there will probably be a sudden jump in sales of camomile tea beginning today.

I thought it was awfully funny, your repartee with Eugene the first time you came into the Parme establishment. He did not know you when he said your way of doing your hair was old-fashioned. Your comeback was cute, too. You said:

"Well, I'm an old-fashioned girl, the kind your mother would like you to marry."

MARRIAGE SCORNED

"No, not with that head of hair?"

What's this about your going to Europe soon? Has it been announced officially, or do secrets slide from screen stars' lips in the supposed privacy of a hairdresser's booth?

When I stepped up to you at the end of the hour, as you pulled your black hat on over the lovely shoulder-length blonde hair with its ends curled so gracefully under instead of up, you answered to your name. I asked:

"Won't you give be an autograph, Miss Garbo?"

"I'm so sorry, but I really can't. There are so many—if I begin, I could never stop."

"But couldn't you make an exception of me?"

"I'm sorry."

By the way, Louis Parme says the first time he saw you he thought you were an English schoolgirl!

Before you left, you told a fib, I think. You said you were doing nothing on New Year's Eve. I know you didn't watch your face in that glass while your hair was washed and curled and looked so anticipatory for nothing. I'm sure you had a date, like any other girl!

HURT AT PARTY, BOY FACES QUIZ

Homicide detectives today were to question William F. Wakefield, 20, State College student, of Mississippi avenue, Dormont, to learn his version of the New Year's Eve fight in William Penn Hotel ballroom in which he suffered a probable skull fracture. He is in Homeopathic Hospital.

Under arrest in connection with the slugging of Wakefield, but at liberty on his own recognizance is Harry Rubin, of 904 Adeliade street, well known in political circles.

According to Homicide Detectives Robert Carroll and William O'Kane, the fight began when Wakefield, tossing a bill on the table at which Rubin and his two daughters and another couple were seated, offered to buy a drink.

Sent away from the table, Wakefield returned, struck Rubin, and was floored by Rubin, according to Rubin's story to detectives.

ILL BOY AIDED, KEEPS DOG

Several persons have come to the aid of little Eugene Brady, 8, of Lincoln Place, who offered to sell his pet Chow dog "Teddy Bear," in order to buy medicine for himself.

The Airport Pharmacy, on Mifflin road, Lincoln place, announced they would fill the child's prescriptions free, as well as those of others unable to pay for medicine.

Money for the family was turned over to the Sun-Telegraph by two persons who refused to divulge their identity, and was delivered to Mrs. Margaret Brady, the child's mother.

The child has been ill five of his eight years, and spent 18 months in the Children's Hospital. When his father had little work, and the family had no money to purchase medicine for him, he offered to sell his dog to relieve the financial strain on his family.

All-Star Convicts Give Prison Show

AUBURN, N. Y., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Otto Sanford and his Melody Boys from the south cell block, "Fang Chu, the Oriental Mystery," doing a stretch for a grand larceny job, and an all-star cast, put on a vaudeville variety for the Auburn prison patronage yesterday.

Reformers' Doom Seen in Finland Anti-Dry Vote

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Commenting upon the anti-prohibition election victory in Finland, the Crusaders, an organization opposed to the dry laws, said:

"A decade ago an attempt was being made to keep over 300,000,000 people sober at the point of a shotgun, but today all but 123,500,000 have thrown off the yoke of the reformer.

"The Crusaders search the current news columns in vain for some cheery comment from Messrs. McBride, Dinwiddie, Poling, et al (national prohibition leaders) on the anti-dry result of Finland's referendum. Could it be that these spokesmen of righteousness see no comfort in a three-to-one majority for personal liberty and the throwing out of such reformers as themselves?"

A bullet fired from a reveler's revolver shortly before the climax of the New Year's hilarity, became imbedded in the floor of the second floor hallway in the home of Mrs. M. Otto, 7430 Idlewild street, Homewood.

The Otto family, preparing to retire, were frightened by a crash in the bathroom. The bullet fired from the street, made its way through a narrow areaway, struck the wall of the adjoining house, then rebounded and shattered the bathroom window of the Otto home, continued through the open doorway of the bathroom and then imbedding in the floor of the hallway.

FALLING WALL KILLS BOY IN M'KEESPORT

Three Hurt When Collapse Crushes Shanty; Victims Dug From Ton of Debris

One boy was killed, and three others were injured in the collapse of a stone wall in the rear of 605 White street, McKeesport, late yesterday. The wall slid 10 feet, toppling on a shanty in which the boys were seated.

The dead boy was Anthony Martines, 10, of 605 White street. Two of his injured companions were taken to the McKeesport Hospital, where their hurts were reported not serious. They were Edward Kanyk, 7, of 603 White street, and George Salopek, 9, of 604 White street.

TRAPPED BOYS SAVED

Dragon Salopek, 7, brother of George, escaped with a slight leg injury. The other three were buried under a section of the wall weighing about a ton. Rescuers had to split the huge block of stone and mortar to get the entombed boys to safety.

The shanty, built in a corner formed by the wall and the side of a bakery shop, was a popular rendezvous of children who gathered to enjoy the odors of fresh baked goods. George Salopek, lying on a cot in the hospital, explained:

"Our shack was nice and warm, and we could smell the fresh bread. We had a nice club and we never bothered nobody."

WEEPS FOR PAL

His eyes filled with tears as he recalled the accident:

"All at once the wall fell over on us. Tony was sitting alongside me and the big stone hit him on the head. It came right over on top of us and we couldn't get out. My brother was sitting across from me and he jumped out. I guess he didn't get hurt much."

Tony Martines was crushed beneath the huge block. His skull was fractured and his chest crushed.

Police and firemen, assisted by a score or more of the male residents of the district, dug the boys out of the debris. Martines was dead when rescuers reached him.

Don't Pick Sheik, Judge Tells Leap Year Girls

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Judge Henry Meade, of the Wyandotte County Probate Court, has announced ten commandments to guide women seeking to take advantage of leap year. They follow:

Don't pick a sheik.

Don't let a handsome face influence your better judgment.

Don't shy from the bashful because the bashful are shy.

Consider the man who considers nickels.

Believe not that the man with the motor car has the only vehicle to happiness.

Remember clothes may make the man and fill the clothes closet, but they don't fill the pantry.

Don't delay a proposal because he is old-fashioned. He may be like your father.

Demand much character, but be satisfied with a small part of the pay check.

Don't be finicky; you have faults yourself.

Let love be the only consideration; after all nothing else counts.

PRESBYTERIANS COMPLETE PLAN OF UNION IN MERGER

SUGGESTIONS MAILED TO CHURCHES

United Assembly to Pass On Proposal; Approval Not Possible Before 1934

Merger of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the United Presbyterian Church of North America in 1934 was today a possibility with the completion of a Plan of Union by the special Joint Committee on Organic Union, headed by the Rev. Dr. William J. Reid of the First United Presbyterian Church, Oakland.

Containing a preface, articles of government, principles, Book of Discipline and a Directory for Worship, the plan provided the union would not be consummated until a united assembly adopted definite rules. The plan, it added, is being sent to ministers of both denominations in branch [illegible]

MEET HERE MARCH 8

Suggestions for changes will be accepted by the committee until March 1. Changes will be considered at a committee meeting in Pittsburgh March 8, Dr. Reid said.

The plan of union will be submitted to the general assembly of each church meeting separately next May. If approved by both groups, the plans will be considered by the Presbytery of each denomination. Approval by these groups will bring the merger before the general assembly separately in 1934 and then before a united assembly, according to present plans.

Dr. Reid cited that while the union is commonly termed a merger, the action in reality will be the establishing of a new church. Its official name will be the Presbyterian Church of America.

DOCTRINAL BASIS

The doctrinal basis of the union reads:

"The union shall be affected on the doctrinal basis of the Westminster Confession of Faith, together with the amendments adopted in 1903 by the Presbyterian church together with the Confessional Statement adopted in 1925 by the United Presbyterian Church ...and together with the larger and shorter catechisms; all of which are recognized as being substantially indentical in doctrinal teaching, and agreeable to and founded upon the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, acknowledged as the inspired Word of God, the only infallible rule of faith and practice."

PITTSBURGHERS AID

A Formula of Subscription forms a vow to be taken by ministers, Dr. Reid declared. It a vital part of the plan since it is the church's only defense against ministers not loyal to its doctrines.

Six Pittsburghers besides Dr. Reid are serving on the committee. They are Presbyterians the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr and Attorney Thomas D. McCloskey; United Presbyterian the Rev. Dr. John McNaugher, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Baldinger, the Rev. Dr. E. C. McCown and Attorney John B. Echanuer.

COXEY ASSUMES MAYOR POST

MASSILLON, O., Jan. 2.—(AP)—Thirty-eight years ago he was Gen. Jacob S. Coxey, leader of a straggly army of unemployed. Today he is Mayor Jacob S. Coxey of Massillon—and still fighting for the idea that came to him in a dream.

Coxey, at 77, was formally sworn in as Mayor yesterday. He asserted:

"The whole nation has its eyes turned to Massillon. I am going to try to solve this economic problem our nation faces.

"Thirty-eight years ago last midnight I had a dream in which the plan I have been advocating since that time came to me."

The plan is to issue $200,000 in low-interest bearing bonds in denominations as low as a dollar, to be used as a medium of exchange in putting the unemployed to work on public improvements. Monday night, he said, he will ask the city Council to approve the bonds.

The plan is the same he tried to put before the public in 1894 in the famous march of "Coxey's Army."

CARDINAL ASKS TEMPERANCE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Declaring that prohibition has not performed the miracles expected, Cardinal Dougherty called for a revival of the Catholic Temperance and Total Abstinence Societies.

Speaking at the New Year reception tendered him by 60 societies of the Philadelphia archdiocese, the Cardinal said:

When prohibition was passed, many thought there would be no further need for temperance societies, and hence we discontinued the practice of administering a pledge to boys and girls.

"According to experts such as judges and the police, there is much or more drunkenness today than before the passage of the Volstead act.

"It, therefore, has become necessary to resume giving the pledge to boys and girls and to exhort the parish priest to urge membership in these temperance societies."

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin, Radio Editor

"WHO WILL BE the Next President?" is the engrossing subject of William Randolph Hearst, famous publisher, in a coast to coast NBC broadcast which will be heard in Pittsburgh over WCAE at 7:15 o'clock tonight . . . Mr. Hearst will speak from the studio of KFI in Los Angeles . . . The new schedule of The Gloom Chasers—Col. Stoopnagle and Budd—has been changed again . . . starting next week, Mondays and Wednesdays from 8:45 to 9, Fridays, 10:45 to 11, and Saturdays, 8 to 8:15 . . . Wayne King is due back on NBC-WCAE Sunday, January 17 . . . now on tour in the Middle West.

Question a Day:

How many regular artists appearing from day to day or week to week are employed by the networks?—Carol J. Swissvale.

Answer—There is so much duplication and doubling by the performers that, actually, there are only 509 artists on the NBC payroll, and about 270 on Columbia.

* * *

Studio Lights:

NBC started the year off right with a unique synchronization broadcast yesterday, the one suggested some months ago by this department . . . Bebe Daniels in Hollywood and Marion Harris in New York sang individually to the accompaniment of music played by Paul Whiteman in Chicago . . . many listeners heard for the first time the soft, pleasant voice of the heavy-set maestro . . .

Sen Kaney's joking remark that, a few years hence, Whiteman might, with the aid of television and headsets, direct his orchestra with the individual players sitting comfortably at home, is not beyond realization . . .

The stunt NBC pulled yesterday was vetoed when we suggested it to a local station . . . we passed it on to NBC and they sold it to Oldsmobile for $15,000 . . . any rags, any iron, any bottles today?

The All-America Orchestra team you picked was a winner . . . seven of the eleven candidates are leading in the national poll . . .

Mary and Bob return to the air Tuesday night at 8:30 over WEAF, WTIC, WTAM and WGY . . .

Kay Kyser moves from WTAM, Cleveland, to the Gibson Hotel, in Cincinnati, on Friday, January 8 . . .

"The Shadow" and the "Northwest Mounted Police" are to vie for an audience on Monday nights . . . "The Shadow" opens up Monday night on WJAS and the police a week later on KDKA . . .

One day, years ago, when Vaughn de Leath was asked to say "Ah!" for her doctor, he predicted a great singing career for her . . . and CBS, who snatched Vaughn when NBC became indifferent, are building her to the point where NBC will soon say "Ah!" in a higher key . . .

Columbia's New Year's Eve dancing party presented five and a half hours of music without the repetition of a single number . . .

Mary McCoy has stepped down from an exalted position in the radio world to an insignificant role in the court of The Cuckoos, WJZ, WJR, WGAR, 10:15 tonight . . .

The WTAM mailman is glad Christmas is over . . . Gene and Glenn received 10,659 cards, outranking Tom Manning by 7,000 and your humble correspondent by 9,812 . . . one of our New Year greetings was a large autographed picture from Loretta Young, who wrote the column for you one day last summer . . .

Milton Cross, who sounds mournful, is always the life of the party when he comes to Pittsburgh.

Terry McGovern, timekeeper for the Yellow Jackets, has been chosen to announce the hockey games for WWSW.

Today's Tid Bit:

Four pets in the home of Marion Harris, NBC contralto, form a small League of Nations. They are: Pal, a German police dog; Sally, a French bull; Miss Sue, a tiny Pekingese, and Satan, just an ordinary black American cat.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Events

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Christmas Day, even in this complex age, still remains very much a family affair, but New Year's Day has always been a time shared with friends and acquaintances. Instead of making a round of calls on New Year's Day, though, most folks nowadays meet their friends at teas and tea-dances at the various clubs.

Two notable events attracted hundreds of the smart set yesterday afternoon, the tea-dance at the exclusive old Pittsburgh Club with its simple dignity and the tea at the Duquesne Club featuring the new addition. Many attended both events, with the younger set to be found at the Pittsburgh Club. And New Year's night brought the Princeton Triangle Club to the Pitt Theater in "Spanish Blades." Many of the members of the cast were guests at the teas in the afternoon.

The Pittsburgh Club ballroom was simply decorated with palms and ferns and poinsettias, which also centered the tea tables.

In Black Chiffon

Mrs. Thomas A. McGinley was one of the early arrivals at the Pittsburgh Club, which gave the tea-dance instead of the usual New Year's Eve ball. She wore a gracious gown of black chiffon having silver gray and white chiffon with black to form long, full sleeves, and a girdle of black and silver. Her hat was black and small.

Mrs. Morgan B. Schiller looked smart in a lipstick red crepe gown having a smart braided black patent leather belt and in a red felt hat. A skirt of brown crepe with a cream lame blouse was worn by Mrs. Roy A. Hunt.

Mrs. William Christopher Robinson, Jr., chose a smart black wool suit with a tunic blouse of white satin and a black felt hat.

The collar of her jacket was white fur. Chatting with her was Margaret Holdship in a green ensemble. Marie Louise Bickford chose black velvet with brief sleeves of lace which also formed the back of the bodice, and Mrs. Allen Gordon was in red crepe and wore a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Alexander Robinson chose an interesting printed crepe with a black background printed in red and white.

A navy-blue crepe frock with a hat to match was worn by Mary Franklin Robinson. And she had a corsage of orchids.

Arriving with her son and daughter-in-law, the Jack Lewises, was Mrs. J. E. Lewis.

Eggplant Crepe

Mrs. Jack Lewis chose an interesting gown of eggplant crepe, with which she wore a chic felt turban of the same shade, having a knot of green velvet as the only trimming.

Mrs. Bair Childs chose a black velvet gown having fur-banded short sleeves and a black velvet hat. One of the most attractive costumes was that of Lucretia Billings, a debutante. Her dress was of sunset red velvet with a turban of the same material tied with silver lame. With her was Mary Black in ruby velvet.

Madelaine Alexander chose a pencil blue crepe dress and a blue felt hat, and Sylvia Robertson chose a medieval gown of black velvet having the brief sleeves and square neckline edged with rhinestone embroidery.

Among the social leaders there were Mrs. H. N. Van Voorhis in black velvet with the long full sleeves embroidered with metal, and Mrs. Robert Milligan in black satin.

Mrs. Carroll P. Davis was there wearing brown chiffon. Mrs. James B. Oliver in garnet red velvet, and Mrs. J. G. Pontefract in black velvet.

Visitor Attends

Nancy Jane Longenecker arrived with Margaret and Eleanor Mann. Gretchen Bickford, another debutante, wore black velvet with black lace net topping the bodice.

Mrs. William Booth chose black satin; Mrs. Gordon Fisher Jr., black crepe with a bodice of blue, and Mrs. Fisher was in black.

Arriving with Katharine Collin in a black wool costume was Jessamine Goddard, of New York, here for the Rose-Trimble wedding on Wednesday. She wore black velvet with white net forming the back of the bodice and brief sleeves. Marjorie Kimball was in black velvet, and Katharine Frazer, a debutante of the season, in delphinium blue velvet having a bustle effect. She had a corsage of gardenias.

Anne Rose was in black velvet trimmed in fur, and Mary Elizabeth Floyd in sea-green crepe. Louise Evans looked decidedly Spanish with her brunette coloring and her costume of black velvet, having a bolero jacket of cream lace and a severe wide-brimmed black hat.

Mrs. William B. Scaife was a [illegible] as was Mrs. E. Paul Dunnell, who wore black velvet. Mrs. Benn[illegible] wore black satin, [illegible] white fur at the neck[illegible] ending the short [illegible]

Virginia Brock was in black and white crepe, and her sister Ruth in brown crepe. Betty Kennedy, one of the debs of the season, looked interesting in a black velvet gown having a severe neckline and white fur forming the cuffs.

Mrs. Solon A. Person Jr. was in black crepe, trimmed in red, and her sister, Mrs. H. C. May Jr., in red crepe.

Gowned in Velvet

Helen Murdoch chose a blue crepe gown.

Frances Johnston wore an interesting gown, combining a skirt of black velvet and corsage of brocaded cream satin.

Mrs. Nathaniel Holmes II was in black and gold, and her daughter, Josephine Swift, in black crepe with a bodice of green having long swing sleeves.

Genevieve Bell looked smart in a blue wool frock with a blue hat, and Mrs. T. J. Hilliard chose Bourdette Kirkendall was lovely in black velvet. Striking looking Mrs. Gilbert Raffetty of Sewickley wore scintillating white satin with a black velvet jacket.

Helen Pemberton wore coral red crepe having a short tunic effect, embroidered in gold. Jane Marshall wore green crepe with a large black felt hat, and her sister Mary chose a black wool suit having the shoulder capes banded in ermine black satin with white satin accenting the bodice.

Mrs. J. Frederic Byers was there daughter Peggy in hunting green crepe and black velvet hat.

A more scintillating array of gowns I have not seen before this season than at the Princeton Triangle Club's presentation of "Spanish Blades" at the Pitt Theater last night.

Triangle Play

The debutante set was very well represented by Gretchen Bickford in green crepe. Katharine Frazer in white chiffon fashioned with a billowy pleated skirt and brief jacket of silver sequin. Betsy Robinson in blue satin. Rita Borntraeger in pumpkin lace with an ermine jacket. Betty Higgins in black satin and Martha Mitchell Yost in green crepe. Anne [illegible] saw Lucretia Billings in ivory satin and Betty Kennedy in wood violet purple transparent velvet.

Eleanor Rowe, a popular member of the young set, wore white satin and attractive Katherine Collin was there wearing blue velvet with a cloth of gold wrap furred with white fox. I noticed Mrs. John O. Frazer among the audience and Peggy Painter and Mrs. Henry C. Bughman Jr. Peggy Berger, too. I saw in purple velvet and Mrs. Dorwin Donnell.

Frances Preble Reed chose a gown of green crepe and Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III, black crepe. Jane and Margaret Marshall were among the huge crowd, and Jane chose white chiffon and her sister blue satin.

Colored Gowns

I saw Mrs. Carl H. Borntraeger in red and gold lame and Rosamound Fitch and Mary Franklin Robinson in a gown having the bodice of red satin and the skirt of black. I caught a glimpse of Virginia Wilcox and Mrs. Francis Sellers Guthrie in black crepe. Betty McKay, a bud of the past season, wore blue crepe, and Mrs. Thomas J. Hilliard chose black satin having a deep cape, banded with bright green. Wilhelmina Baiken wore a beige lace with a green velvet fingertip jacket.

White chiffon embroidered with rhinestones was the choice of Mrs. Wallace Hurtle Rowe, Jr., and blue satin of Marie Louise Bickford. Kathleen Guthrie chose supple black velvet having the neckline outlined with bands of old blue and black velvet entwined. Jane Sloan was piquant in jade green velvet with a matching velvet wrap.

Charming Eloise Dorrance chose pale blue crepe with a bunny jacket and Mrs. Mortimer Miller black velvet. Mary Elizabeth Floyd I saw, and Emma Coulter from Greensburg, whose blondness was enhanced by a flowing gown of sapphire blue velvet with which she wore a black caracul coat. Mrs. J. Clifton Jenkins wore black tulle with a black velvet and white jet knee-length wrap.

Garbed in Sapphire

With her mother, Mrs. George G. Edwards, in black crepe, was Mary Edwards in cream satin with a red velvet jacket. Constance Drake, another sub-deb, appeared in peach satin with a blue velvet wrap, and Mrs. H. Woods chose fuschia purple crepe and Mrs. G. Harton Singer in Paddy green. Genevieve Bell chose blue chiffon, and I saw the Bernard Shea Hornes and Ruth Willock. Elizabeth Rutan was there, and I caught a glimpse of Fredericka Holdship in blue lace, and the Calvin Wellses.

BEIGE RETURNS TO COLOR CARD IN NEW ENSEMBLES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Jan. 2. — Those who have begged for beige to be restored to the color card will be glad that their petition has been answered. Beige wasn't very much used this year; that is, quite unrelieved, for it was usually used together with brown. So many women like a beige ensemble for spring and summer wear. It certainly is a hue that lends itself well to warm weather wear and is an excellent compromise between the darker colors and white. It is an extremely becoming color to the right type and as nearly all women are fully persuaded that they are the right type, it is a universally popular color. It is particularly liked for ensemble wear, as there is something very rich and attractive about the color when done in a frock and matching coat. Lately, I have seen quite a number of beige frocks at afternoon affairs, worn with mink or other brown fur coats, a very pleasing variant of the ensemble and a forerunner of the real spring ensemble.

* * *

TODAY WE SHOW a sketch of an extremely attractive ensemble done in beige and suitable for early spring wear in town. The dress is of biscuit-colored crepe marocain. The gracefully draped bodice has an effective trimming of fagotting which is repeated on the cuffs and skirt yoke. Fagotting remains ever popular and is seen on the smartest frocks. The front of the skirt is flared in stitched radiating ridges extending down from the yoke, a most attractive and new detail. The becoming coat is of matching beige wool, with a rather loose weave like a fancy homespun. It is fitted to the figure at the bodice and waistline with narrow tucks. The wide revers and three-quarter sleeves are bordered with nutria, thus keeping the popular brown and beige combination intact. This most wearable ensemble is by Philippe et Gaston.

MOVIE MURDER :-: X Marks the Spot In Beauty Parlor :-: NEW SHOWS :-: Critics Have Their Say About the Talkies

Phillips Holmes in Another Killing Drama Planned For February

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by King Features Syndicate.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.

What better spot for a murder than a beauty-parlor? With curtained booths handy for disposal of the body.

This Macabre thrill is promised in "The Flagrant Years," which Paramount will start shooting around the first of February. Maybe you read the Samuel Hopkins Adams' story in the Cosmopolitan. At any rate, Zoe Akins has been commissioned to transfer its colorful background and exciting mystery into a motion picture script.

Phillips Holmes

The two romantic leads will be played by Carole Lombard and Phillips Holmes, both favorites.

DAILY GOSSIP

Jack Gilbert and Lupe Velez had a spat and it's all off, at least for the moment . . . Joel McCrea taking Dorothy Jordan to lunch every day at the R-K-O commissary . . . They're still laughing at First National about the well-known millionaire who paraded around in the rain, wearing a 10-gallon hat and telling the world: "I'm from Texas, I'm from Texas" . . . Gene Fowler called the Chamber of Commerce and asked if the 2-inch downpour was unusual . . . Monte Blue says his first picture for M. H. Hoffman will be a story. Following that, he has seven more to do. All will be out-of-doors pictures . . . Jean Hersholt is rehearsing for the role of the hotel porter in "Grand Hotel" . . . Saw him and Marie Dressler visiting Marion Davies' set. Marie personally designed a ring, which was a Christmas gift to her friend, Claire Du Brey . . . Phil Harris, blues-singer of the Loffner and Harris Dance Orchestra, was down from San Francisco to take a screen test for Mervyn Leroy . . . George W. Stratton, treasurer of Warner Brothers, is in town . . . Jimmy Durante says the only trouble with his Christmas ties is he can't look down and see them.

SOMETHING'S AFOOT

Though mystery prevails, something is surely afoot at RKO, concerning the story, "Blood and Wine," which was to have featured Dolores Del Rio and Ricardo Cortez.

Report has it that the part is now being re-written for Constance Bennett. But, in that case, what of "Free to Live," which was to have been Connie's next?

Head-man Dave Selznick will commit himself only to this extent:

"The story is being written with Dolores Del Rio in mind, but it might be either for Constance Bennett or Ann Harding."

So there you are. At any rate, these swift changes make reporting Hollywood an exciting job.

On Parade

Winnie Lightner, funny girl of the films, has the lead in the "Manhattan Parade," picture feature in the Warner.

Four Comics In Davis Film

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Marilyn Miller appears on the screen again in "Her Majesty, Love," the Davis feature. Ben Lyon has the hero role. The supporting cast includes a quartet of comedians, the Messrs. Leon Errol and W. C. Fields, old stagers, and Ford Sterling and Chester Conklin, long associated with the movies.

The picture is a pleasant comedy romance, with music and laughs. Miss Miller is seen as a bar maid in Berlin. A rich young man wants to dance with her, and when it develops her price for a dance is a wedding ring they become engaged.

And does the engagement horrify the young man's relations. And the fact that Mr. Fields, the future father-in-law, performs juggling tricks doesn't help matters any.

There are numerous scenes in the gay and elaborate atmosphere of what is supposed to be a classy Berlin cafe. And there's no Mr. Volstead around so you can guess that some of the characters have a tipsy time of it.

'The Champ' Film In Sheridan Square

"The Champ," co-starring Jackie Cooper and Wallace Beery, is the new film in the Sheridan Square Vaudeville on the stage features Howe, Leonard and Koeppe in "In Step With the Times" and Jimmie Donnelly and Eddie Bisland in "Up in the Clouds."

Whisper!

Ben Lyon demonstrates that the old stage whisper also can be effective on the screen in this scene with Marilyn Miller in "Her Majesty Love," current in the Davis and opening Wednesday in the Enright.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Charles Purcell, who comes to the Nixon Monday in "The Chocolate Soldier," has a yen to play "intoxicated gentlemen." Not unique, this desire, but perhaps natural, considering it's the way of the world just now, and the fact that he made his first hit as a potted gent. Chas is co-starred with Vivienne Segal in this'n, which will be presented at six night puffawmences and Wed and Sat matinays.

* * *

Small Timer says that in the old days the water wagon was overburdened this time o'year, but now it is merely over.

* * *

When George Sidney, Lewis K's big brother, was doing "Welcome Stranger" on the stage and had never dreamed of "Mr. Cohen" in the movies, Mabel Julienne Scott played the leading feminine role. Afterwards Miss Scott was in pictures, too, and now she is back of the footlights again in "Strange Interlude," having the role of Nina Leeds. "Strange Interlude" will be in the Alvin for a week beginning Monday. No matinees, as the show begins at 5:30.

* * *

Small Timer says a lot of folks have been blinded by having gold dust thrown into their eyes.

* * *

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which will be the regular attraction in the Warner today week, will be the special Sunday midnight feature in the same theater tomorrow. Frederick March plays the dual role.

* * *

Small Timer says some people are so tired that they would rather be in the hay than in clover.

* * *

Another cinematic week is upon the Harris, where the principal screen attraction, opening today, is Lewis Ayres in "Heaven On Earth."

Greta Garbo's 'Mata Hari' Is Fine

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mata Hari the dancer, one of a number of women executed by the French during the war as a spy, did not become as famous as Edith Cavell but Greta Garbo makes up for that now by appearing in this character on the screen. "Mata Hari" as a picture has all the ingredients of the spy dramas written since Sardou perfected the formula, and they are agreeably as well as effectively mixed. It is an impressive picture, with particularly fine acting by Lionel Barrymore and the seductive Greta.

George Seibel

Mata Hari, of course, falls in love with the young Russian aviator, Ramon Novarro, whose dispatches she has photographed for the Wilhelmstrasse. She saves his life, though she sacrifices her own. Just about the same situation that Marlene Dietrich and some others have been in. We are glad these ladies are such heroines when it comes to facing a firing squad.

Well, Greta is a heroine, and wears many stunning costumes, and does a fine dance before Siva, and plays some scenes like a real little Sarah Bernhardt. Ramon Novarro is the hero and looks it, while Lewis Stone is a suave and frigid superspy.

The stage show is a very pleasing entertainment, with Billy House as its most entertaining feature—yes, the biggest feature! There is fast dancing in every style, and some catchy songs, and a Victor Herbert medley well played by Hoehle's orchestra. The patrons felt they had started the New Year right.

Loony Laugh Parade in Warner

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Manhattan Parade" looney and hilarious movie spree is in the Warner. It's a laugh riot.

Winnie Lightner tops the cast. She's seen as the operator of a theatrical costume shop. But that goofy team of Smith and Dale and the unsmiling and dazed Charles Butterworth are the life of the parade.

Smith and Dale are seen as a couple of cheese merchants who back an insane show producer. This fellow tears out the theater seats and stages his show there, putting the audience on the stage. And he places the orchestra in the balcony. They don't have any musical instruments, but they don't need any. They hum.

A romantic angle is brought in involving Winnie. But it is all secondary and lost in preparations for the craziest play premiere that you ever witnessed.

The picture is done in color.

Bud Rodgers Feature in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

With Buddy Rogers in the stage presentation and Marian Marsh and Regis Toomey on the screen in "Under Eighteen," a pleasant little picture in the featherweight class, the Stanley yesterday gave its customers a good beginning of a happy New Year. Buddy appeared to be the chief center of interest, and it is to be assumed that all feminine hearts experienced doubling up of heart-beats when he made his entrance all in white flannels, varnished hair and a glad-to-see-you smile.

Furthermore, Buddy made good as an entertainer. If anybody thinks Buddy was faking in that picture of some time ago in which he crashed through as a band leader who could play most of the instruments, they are mistaken, as he proved yesterday.

He made the sliphorn sob soulfully, tootled the cornet, umpahed the sousaphone, spanked the snaredrum and tickled the accordion. Also he sang and pepped things up generally. Buddy's all right, and he registered in that big way, as was shown when the time came for applause.

A good many familiar movie patterns were cut up and bits of them patched together to make the picture "Under Eighteen," which shows again that love is love, and that good girls and good boys can play a little with fire and still be decent.

The result is that Regis and Marian are in the clinch at the finale with Marian's sister and the latter's husband at the beach having a second honeymoon after Marian had endured a lot to get money so Sis could buy a divorce. Just life, all over again. Warren William is in the picture, too.

The stage presentation also has Vera Marsh, the little comedienne who is seeing her third Pittsburgh stage this season, first in "East Wind" and recently in "The Wonder Bar." She was liked in a speck of comedy, a sprinkle of song and a dash of dance. Stan Cavanaugh, who can talk as funnily as he juggles rubber balls and indian clubs was the big laugh feature of the bill. Another dancing team and the stepping ensemble completed an enjoyable bill.

Gaynor-Farrell Picture Held Over in Fulton

"Delicious," co-featuring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, is now on a second week in the Fulton. It is a musical film romance with a Cinderella girl theme.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

I WENT TO Sing Sing the other afternoon to help out on a show for the prisoners. As I entered the little room that led to the auditorium, I encountered one of the biggest kicks I've had in a long, long time. A neatly attired prisoner stepped forward and shook my hand.

"Glad to welcome you here, Mark," he said. "I suppose you remember me, don't you? Russell Ryder?"

Of course I remembered him. You, too, I suppose. Why, it was only a short time ago that he was being hailed far and wide as the biggest spender that ever struck Broadway. I've written about him in this space at least 20 times, and there isn't a columnist in the nation who hasn't mentioned him at one time or another.

Ryder's game came to an end after he went through several million dollars. He's doing three years now in Sing Sing. And I can't quite describe the strange sensation I experienced while we talked.

Here was a courteous gentleman who was really the king of Broadway for a long time. The big spender is usually noisy and boring. Ryder was neither. He was quiet and unobtrusive. The women were slightly daffy about him. When I tell you that, after one of his parties, every girl left with a $1,000 bill in her purse—you will understand why.

To orchestras and night club performers he was the soul of generosity. Foolish, perhaps, but it was his pleasure to give money away. He loved to request certain numbers. And when they were played and sung for him he always rewarded the orchestra and the artist with a tip that ranged anywhere from $100 to $1,000.

The boys eagerly awaited requests from Ryder—and Ryder loved to make them. But now what? The somber, gray outfit has replaced the dinner jacket. And the order has replaced the request.

So we talked. Small talk, really. What else can there be at such a meeting?

"Tell me, Russell," I asked, "what do you do with yourself? How do you pass the time?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"You get accustomed to it, Mark," he replied. "I suppose that's the way with everything in life. After awhile, you get so that you live for the mail and the visits. You have no idea how you count the hours when they lead to a visit.

"It's a funny thing. I always wanted to dodge so many people. Tried my best to get away from company that didn't appeal to me. But it's all so different now. If the people I once avoided would drop in for a little hello and a chat, I'd be a much happier guy."

Several of the performers had drifted along. Ryder knew them all, especially the boys and girls from the night clubs. Suddenly his eyes lighted up.

"Say," he cried, "isn't that Chick Endor and Charlie Farrell over there?"

I nodded.

"Sure," I replied. "They came along to do a few numbers for the boys. They're a swell combination, too. Still about the best bet around the night clubs."

The ex-millionaire put out his hand.

"I'll say goodbye to you, Mark," he asserted. "I've got to go over and speak to those two boys. I want to catch them before they go on."

"What for?" I inquired.

His eyes danced.

"I want to request a number," he replied happily.

The same guy . . .

ACCORDING to Jack L. it actually happened on the Coast a short while ago. A powerful picture magnate, with a chain of picture houses all over the nation, has been so busy making money that he never had the opportunity to learn either to read or to write.

To cover his ignorance, he surrounds himself with capable secretaries of every description. And, with such protection, he manages to get by without his secret leaking out.

He was sitting in his office recently, interviewing a famous author from the east. In the midst of the conversation a telegram was brought in and placed on his desk. The magnate excused himself, opened the wire, pretended to read it and then burst into hearty laughter.

"Ha, ha, ha," he ha-ha'd, "that certainly is funny. Ha, ha, ha."

Then, excusing himself from his visitor, he left the room to see one of his secretaries and find out what the wire had said.

The author, left alone, wondered what had caused this sudden hilarious outburst. Curiosity overcame him. He picked up the wire and read it.

"Your Denver theater burned to the ground this morning," read the telegram. "Wire instructions at once." . . .

WILL ROGERS SAYS

ABOARD S. S. PRESIDENT TAFT, Jan. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Shaighai was a knockout. It's Brooklyn gone English. Say, where did they get this Chinese chop suey stuff. I have run the legs off every rickshaw motorman in China and nobody ever any more heard of it than Nevada did Volstead. Another hoax was that the word of a Chinese was as good as his bond. Well that goes with the chop suey. That might have been in the old days, but not since the missionaries and businessmen come in. Chinese are just as human as anybody now.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

RAILWAY AGE SEES TIDE TURNING

January Expected to Mark End of Long Decline in Earnings; Traffic Gaining

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The tide turns in favor of the railroads tomorrow, the Railway Age said in its annual review.

It offered a prophecy that January 1, 1932, would long be recognized as the critical point at which the earning capacity of the railways ceased to decline and began to increase.

At the beginning of 1932 the railway organ said, the tide had turned in the affairs of the railroads because there was going into effect an increase of $100,000,000 or more annually in their freight rates, and there was in immediate prospect a reduction for one year of 10 per cent in their basic wage scales which upon the basis of the payroll of 1931 would save them about $215,000,000.

Assuming an increase in freight business, if continued the total benefit derived by the railways from these changes would exceed this aggregate of $315,000,000 and a slight improvement in freight business actually was occurring.

AISHTON OPTIMISTIC

The normal annual purchases by American railroads from manufacturers average $1,350,000,000 and from fuel producers $350,000,000, a total of $1,700,000,000 reduced in 1931 nearly 50 per cent.

R. H. Aishton, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, in a statement said that "anyone who is pessimistic as to the railroads' future is lacking in confidence in the future of the United States." He expressed confidence that legislators, shippers, regulating authorities and public would not permit the railroads to retrogress "to that condition of inadequate transportation which existed only a few years ago."

EQUIPMENT BUYING OFF

The Railway Age said only 235 locomotives were purchased in 931, 10,880 freight cars and 11 assenger cars. The smallest orders ever placed before were reported in 1919 during government operation: 21[illegible] locomotives, 22,062 freight cars, 3[illegible] passenger cars.

More new lines were built in 1931 than in 1930, but more mileage was also abandoned and a net decrease of 47 miles for the year was shown.

The total new mileage built in 1931 was 748, an increase of 235 miles over 1930.

Coal Firms Form Joint Sales Agency

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Appalachian Coals, Inc., a joint sales agency to market the output of high volatile fields of Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia, is being formed under Delaware laws. It is expected the agency will market more than 50,000,000 of the 90,000,000 tons annually sold by all companies of the four states in the high volatile line. A meeting of operators of this territory will be held January 27, at which time final organization of the agency will be completed.

Mexico City Lacks Holiday Church Rites

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Mexico's capital lacked New Year masses in its Catholic churches yesterday as the religious situation reached an impasse.

Services throughout the federal district (Mexico City) were suspended by government order in churches where the priests had not yet complied with the new law limiting the clergy to one for every 50,000 inhabitants and calling for their registration.

Archbishop Pascual Diaz ordered the priests not to comply with the new law. As a consequence, no masses were said, although the churches remained open.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

STEEL PRICE CUTS MARK YEAR-END

Usual Orders for January Shipment Are Lacking; Ingot Output Declines

By B. E. V. LUTY

The year in steel ended poorly, with fresh price declines when in ordinary times a stiffening would be observable, and with a lack of the usual accumulation of shipping orders for January.

Following shading for several weeks sheets and merchant bars have become openly quotable at $2 a ton decline, making black sheets $2.30 to $2.40, galvanized sheets $2.80 to $2.90 and merchant bars $1.50 to $1.60. Weakness for months past in semifinished is recognized by a $1 a ton decline, making billets, slabs and sheet bars $28. Wire products, however, are quotable firm at their recent advances.

PRICE RECORD FAIR

The price record of the year is not a bad one considering the circumstances, for the average of all important finished steel products declined during the year by only $1 to $2 a ton, following $6 a ton decline in 1930 and a little weakening in the late months of 1929. The computation does not include standard rails, which have not changed since their advance to $43 nine years ago.

Last week's steel ingot output was estimated at 18 per cent after deducting one day's working time on account of the holiday. This week, with no holiday on the steel mill calendar, may be estimated at 20 per cent. The next two weeks are likely to show mild increases.

CONSERVATISM RULES

There is not the usual sharp upturn as buyers are proceeding with extreme conservatism and have not placed their usual orders for prompt resumption of activity after the holiday lull. The business is regarded as simply deferred, whereby the usual seasonal increase should be more marked in February and March.

The year's total ingot production was about 25,000,000 gross tons, the smallest since 1921. The year's production was about 63 per cent of 1930, 46 per cent of the record, in 1929, and 55 per cent of the seven-year average through 1929. The last quarter, however, showed a rate of only 12,000,000 tons, just one-half of the peak rate in March. Thus there is much room for increase over the recent rate. By reason of new construction completed early in the year, ingot capacity increased from a little under 67,000,000 tons to about 70,000,000 tons. At present there is no new construction of consequence.

PROSPECTS DULL

All the steel consuming lines are dull and they have no definite prospects except that the automobile industry is certain to have a marked revival following its extremely light production for three months.

Fabricated structural steel lettings in the year totaled about 1,900,000 tons, against 2,689,600 tons in 1930 and 3,597,825 tons in 1929. Activity was relatively well maintained through August, 1930.

Looks to '32

ERNEST T. WEIR

STEEL OUTLOOK CLOUDY—WEIR

Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, in a statement today regarding the 1932 outlook for the steel industry said:

"The steel industry experienced a decline of production in 1931 to approximately 25,000,000 tons, as compared with the average production of approximately 48,000,000 tons for the years 1927 to 1930, inclusive, which we may regard as normal consumption for our present population.

"In the past, the industry has quickly recovered from such interruptions to its steady progress and I am confident of its eventual resumption and continuation as long as the forces of population growth, increase of national wealth and development of new steel uses prevail.

"As to 1932, nothing definite can be put forward. Financial conditions are dominant today and these considerations can continue to prevail for some months to come. However, the country is well liquidated, prices and inventories are low, maintenance has been below normal and the 1932 requirements for materials of all kinds could well be above the average of 1930-31."

Gain in Auto Production Predicted for 1932

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

AUTOMOBILE MAKERS IN THE UNITED STATES and Canada are expected to produce about 3,000,000 cars in 1932 according to a study of the industry made by the Union Trust Company of Cleveland. Complete figures for 1931 are not yet available but it is probable that last year's total reached only 2,500,000 cars.

In predicting this gain of about 20 per cent the Union Trust Company of Cleveland assumes that there will be a moderate improvement in general business but believes that other factors will play a more important part in stimulating motor car production. Among these influences will be:

1—Increased value at lower prices.

2—Reorganizations of dealer forces to a more efficient basis.

3—Accumulated replacement demand.

4—Added sales emphasis caused by the adherence of most companies to the policy of changing models only at the end of the year.

5—Adoption of new improvements having marked sales appeal.

The study also stresses the fact that most automobile companies have established themselves on a more efficient basis than at any time in the past. This will be reflected in ability to show satisfactory profits on a small volume of business.

Past Year Disappointing

THE PAST YEAR was a distinct disappointment to the industry. With plants capable of producing nearly 10,000,000 cars a year the actual output was only about 25 per cent of capacity. The automobile makers reached a high record production of 5,621,715 cars in 1929. This dropped to 3,510,178 in 1930 and to the probable total of only 2,500,000 for 1931.

The survey says that all industry has been readjusting to meet new conditions but declared that the automobile industry had more cause for readjustment than other lines due to its excessive capacity.

That the readjustment process has been effective in the motor industry is shown by figures quoted for a group of large independents, whose unit sales increased but 8 per cent in the third quarter of 1931 compared to 1930 but which showed a combined net profit of $2,047,108, compared with a loss of $3,368,779 for the same quarter of 1930.

Replacement Orders

GIVING MORE VALUE for less money is not exceptional to the motor industry, but the overhauling of dealer forces is, and much has been done to help the dealers establish themselves on a sound basis, particularly with relation to their handling of used cars and disposing of them properly.

A bank of delayed replacement orders promises well for the automobile business when there is any improvement in general conditions, the survey declares, although a considerable part of the potential market has been able to buy but unwilling to do so on account of uncertainty regarding the future, adding:

"Aided by the fact that cars driven beyond the usual limits of use are finally wearing out and must be replaced, automobile manufacturers are centering their attack for 1932 business on the purchasing mood. Improvements withheld during the past two years when there did not seem to be any business in prospect are included in the 1932 models in profusion.

"Every available selling appeal seems to have been adopted and there should be a cumulative effect to the introduction of new features because so much larger a proportion of the makers than ever before are introducing their new models during the winter months instead of at widely scattered dates through the year."

Sales Manager

HAROLD KAY

Mr. Kay, the newly appointed sales manager of Hamburg Brothers, Pittsburgh radio distribution house in the downtown.

GLASS DEMAND GAIN SEEN

While expectations of an increase in demand for flat glass during January are prevalent generally throughout the industry, there has been little thus far to indicate how great or small the gain will be, according to American Glass Review. There is little doubt of a gain in demand as compared with the closing weeks of December. The increase need not be great to show a large percentage of gain over the Holiday season during which demand for flat glass generally reaches its lowest level for the year.

The bulk of demand in January is expected to come from distributors in window glass and rough rolled and wire and special glasses and from automobile manufacturers in plate glass. Orders to be shipped during January will be mostly for the purpose of rounding out depleted stocks, but there is little anticipation that stocks will be increased above minimum requirements. While building activity is below the normal average for the winter season, there continues to be activity here and there and glass will be required.

VIRGINIA MANOR DEVELOPMENT MODERN

Business Men Cite Present As Opportune Time for Construction of Homes

Although mass production is an American household word, there is no reason why members of American households should encase themselves in shells of brick and mortar which spring up mushroom-like in a community.

In a pioneer settlement, where shelter was the primary reason for building, a roof overhead, there was little need to consider the artistic home-giving qualities essential in a permanent dwelling. But when a man has reached a state of leisure and money, which enables him to attain that first real luxury, a home, shelter is a consideration of fundamental, but incidental importance.

ATTAINS IDEALISM

In his business a man may express his own ideas, subject to laws of commerce, administration and competition. In his home only, can the distinct personality of an individual be expressed, with no restraint except his own good taste or lack of it.

A person who has succumbed to the influence of a mechanistic civilization is content with any kind of a house within his means, on any kind of a street. His sense of individuality is not violated by the fact that there are dozens of houses in the same community which have the same sterotyped mediocrity and lack of distinction as his own. To him, size is a good criterion of social position, wealth or attainment. He has no interest in the economy of space, the durability of materials, or the convertibility of a house into a home as long as the paint is new and shiny and all the latest gadgets are in the bathroom.

VALUES GUARDED

But, again, there are families who long to reconcile the old-world atmosphere of their ancestors, whose homes were handed down from generation to generation, with the modern household conveniences of a more sanitary, scientific age. This combination has been successfully effected by a great many believers in Bacon's old maxim that a house is to be lived in as well as looked at.

In Mt. Lebanon there is such a community. It is called Virginia Manor. Every house built there has conformed to certain reasonable architectural standards in order to safeguard the property against the depreciation resulting from the invasion of ugly houses in the neighborhood.

DESIGNS VARY

Every house in Virginia Manor was designed by an architect who is also an artist. Each dwelling is distinctive in period and atmosphere and intended specifically to express the individuality and personality of the family life of its owners.

Smart business men agree that now is an ideal time to buy or build a home in a community which assures permanent and increasing value on the investment. If you have a penchant for some specific architectural type of home, a French provincial manor house or an American colonial, or perhaps some inarticulate preference you have not been quite able to clearly visualize in its entirety, the Southern Hills Land Company, Parker drive at Cochran road, will be glad to discuss the matter with you.

Wholesale Prices Down 18% in Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Wholesale price index of the National Fertilizer Association showed that wholesale prices declined about 18 per cent in 1931, compared with a decline of about 16 per cent in 1930. On December 21, 1931, this index number for 476 commodity quotations, based on the period 1926-28 as 100 was 65.1, against 79.7 a year previous, and 95 two years ago.

N. Y. Reserve Bank Rate Unchanged

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Following the meeting of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, no announcement was made regarding the rediscount rate, which is 3½ per cent.

FOOD COMPANY MERGER DENIED

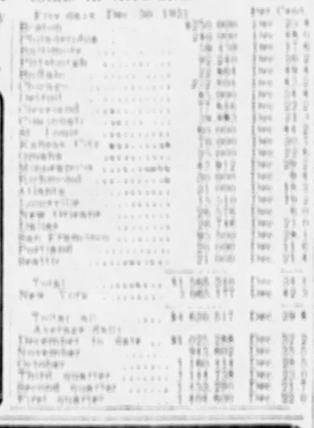
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—Respecting published reports that the forthcoming trip of C. M. Chester, Jr., president, and Clarence Francis, executive vice president of General Foods Corporation to the Pacific Coast is in connection with merger plans with California Packing Corporation, Wetmore Hodges, director of General Foods Corporation, now in San Francisco, formally denied that any such merger proposal or negotiation is in contemplation.

The forthcoming western trip is part of a general tour of General Foods properties, and developments begun earlier this year by Mr. Chester.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Bank clearings for the last week of the year are again considerably reduced and are even smaller than in the preceding week. The total for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $4,630,517,000 is 39.8 per cent under that of a year ago. At New York the amount was $2,065,177,000, a reduction of 42.3 per cent, while the aggregate for cities outside of New York of $1,565,340,000 was 34.4 per cent smaller.

Bank clearings this week, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., showing decreases compared with same period a year ago follow (totals in thousands):



EXPECTS SALES TO SHOW GAIN

According to a letter received by Al Hattenbach, local distributor of Frigidaires, from E. G. Biechler, president and general manager of Frigidaire Corporation, the company plans a more extensive advertising and promotional program for 1932. In 1931 the company built and shipped 35 per cent more household models than during the preceding year. Biechler, in reference to the company's effort to increase sales in 1932, said:

"To attain this still larger volume we are increasing the number and type of our sales and introducing new merchandising methods. Our line has been expanded to meet wider market requirements. We are now building small unit air conditioning plants suitable for either home or office use."

According to Mr. Hattenbach, Frigidaire's 1932 business in this territory should be better than it was last year.

Tire Firm's Sales At Record for 1931

AKRON, O., Jan. 2.—(AP)—General Tire and Rubber during the fiscal year ending November 30, 1931, produced and sold more tire units than during any previous year in its history, President William O'Neil declared in announcing sales of $20,822,000 for the period.

Union Trust Adds $2,000,000 to Surplus

At a meeting of the directors of the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, $2,000,000 was added to the surplus account, this being an addition to the payment of dividends during the year amounting to $3,090,000.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY LOW

Retail trade was quiet this week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Clearance sales were the main stimulus to business and the volume of transactions were low compared with last week.

In wholesale circles, there was very little buying except for strictly filling in purposes, preparations for inventory being the rule. While the movement of holiday merchandise was comparatively heavy, the cash receipts were considerably lower than for several years past, owing principally to lower merchandise values.

Production of bituminous coal continues at from 20 per cent to 25 per cent lower than a year ago and demand is still very quiet. Prices, which are very low, show no material improvement.

There has been no material improvement in collections which continue to average slow.

Jonesmen Real Champs. To Lose Eight Players. Change Reynolds' Style. | Floor Game Delayed. Vines Admits He's Good. Schaaf Watching Step.

TROJANS PROVE RIGHT TO GRID TITLE

THERE CAN BE no question that in being awarded to Southern California on the strength of the latter's victory in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena yesterday, the national football championship goes where it belongs. The 21-to-12 triumph of the Trojans over the previously unbeaten team of Tulane University was the clinching bit of evidence that Howard Jones' eleven was the greatest collegiate outfit in the country for the season now ended.

Howard Jones

Victory in the Rose game does not always carry with it the national title, but in this case championship recognition cannot be withheld from the winner. By overcoming a 14-point lead and beating out Notre Dame in the final quarter the Trojans had practically convinced fandom everywhere except in the South that they were the best team of the season. They swept away most of the southern doubt by crushing Georgia 60 to 0, and after the toppling of Tulane, the first time a southern team has ever been beaten in the Rose Bowl, it will be unanimously conceded that the Jonesmen were in a class of their own.

IT WAS ANOTHER impressive exhibition of power that Southern California gave in piling up 21 points in three quarters against such a team as Tulane, which had won 18 games in succession. Not since Vanderbilt's 32 and Georgia's 31 in 1927 had any opponent scored as many as 21 points against any Tulane team.

No doubt it was because of a natural Trojan let-down and replacements after that big lead had made the game safe that the New Orleans gridders were able to rally and score 12 points in the closing period. At that the Southerners must be given credit for a fine exhibition of gameness and fighting spirit in making such a determined drive in the last stages against the hopeless odds that would have left most teams wilted and listless. But it didn't make Southern California's victory any less convincing. The Trojans were not only the better team of the day, but the best team of the season, in spite of the fact official statistics show Tulane to have outgained them. Touchdowns, not yardage gained, win football games.

NOT ALL OF the New Year's Day laurels went to Coast gridders, as Andy Kerr's team, with Jim MacMurdo, of Pitt, as one of the starting tackles, upheld the honor of the East and Middle West with a 6-to-t victory over the all-West stars.

That makes three victories for Kerr-coached teams in the last five stagings of this feature, a remarkable record in view of the handicap the long trip and the climate are held to place upon northern visitors.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S great team will lose a lot of its strength before another season arrives. Yesterday's game ended the collegiate playing careers of eight of Coach Jones' stars, who will be graduated in the spring. Four will be lost from the front-line trenches and the same number from the backfield. They are Capt. Stan Williamson, center; Johnny Baker, guard, who kicked the field goal that beat Notre Dame in the last minute; Garry Arbelbide, end; Bob Hall, guard and tackle; Ernie Pinckert, all-America halfback; Tom Mallory, halfback; Jim Musick, fullback, and Gaius Shaver, quarterback and fullback. It will be quite a job to replace that group.

Carl Reynolds

ONE REASON WHY Clark Griffith, Washington club president, believes Carl Reynolds will prove a far more valuable player for the Senators than he was for the White Sox is that his style of base running is to be changed.

"It has been said that Reynolds is a player of the brittle type, one easily incapacitated by injury, but I don't believe it," Griffith remarks. "I think the way he tried to play for the White Sox was mainly responsible for his being put out of commission so often. He was slam-banging his way around the bases, evidently intending to intimidate opposing infielders.

"THAT'S OLD-STYLE BASEBALL and doesn't get a base-runner very far these days. The modern infielder knows how to protect himself and yet get his man. So in the majority of cases it is the slam-banging base-runner rather than the infielder that suffers the injury.

"Reynolds' style of base-running will be changed when he joins us. He has enough natural speed to run the bases without resorting to rough tactics. When he stops crashing into infielders unnecessarily he'll stop getting hurt and keep himself in the game."

THERE WAS A note of the old days in the recent news from Cleveland that Nat Holman, formerly basketball's greatest showman and one of the most colorful players that ever stepped on the hardwood courts, had rejoined his old mates to play a single game for the Rosenblum Celtics against the Chicago professionals. It was Nat's first appearance with his old buddies in a long time, as he is not giving much attention to the pro game nowadays. All of his floor activities are devoted to coaching the City College team, of New York.

THE PROPOSED APPEARANCE of the Rosenblums in Pittsburgh against a district team has been postponed owing to the inability of the promoters to find a suitable opponent for a January date. The Rosies and Renaissance may meet here in February. They are to play in Cleveland January 9 and 11. All Cleveland games, by the way, will be played in a cage.

Following the Renaissance games, the Rosies will make their annual southern tour to play 14 games in two weeks. January 28, 29 and 30 are open for teams in the tri-state territory, it is announced by J. J. Freund, Jr., who has charge of the booking. He may be addressed at 225 Charles street, Pittsburgh (10), or called on telephone, Everglade 4297.

SOME YEARS AGO Babe Ruth picked an all-America baseball team and selected himself for right field. There's nothing like letting the world know you're good in case anybody happens to overlook it.

But Sportdom's shrinking violets are not confined to baseball. Ellsworth Vines, national tennis champion, has selected for publication in connection with a signed article the best 10 players in tennis and modestly rates himself at the head of the list as No. 1. Vines will be hard to beat if he gains just a little more self-confidence.

Ernie Schaaf

THEY BECOME VERY cautious as soon as they're in a position to get somewhere in the fight game. Now that Ernie Schaaf has fought his way to a lofty rung on the heavyweight ladder, Manager Johnny Buckley is not going to take any unnecessary chances on his slipping. He has become very particular as to whom Schaaf fights, and flatly turned down an offer from Madison Square Garden in New York for a bout between Ernie and Paulino Uzcudun on January 15, suggesting Max Baer instead of the Spaniard. He figures that a victory over Paulino would not mean enough added prestige to make it worth the risk involved in meeting such a tough foeman. Uzcudun then signed to face King Levinsky in Chicago on that date. Win or lose, Levinsky is to be back in New York for a bout on January 29. It has been suggested that he meet the winner of the January 15 match, but he isn't overly eager to take on Schaaf. It's a great game. They all want to pick their own opponents.

GREGG FORCED OUT OF ACTION BY INJURY

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Yellow Jackets will be meeting the strongest competition that the International Hockey League has to offer when they battle the London Tecumsehs at Duquesne Garden tonight.

During the month of December the Tecumsehs set the fastest pace of any team in the circuit, sweeping from last place into the runner-up berth. When they arrived here today it was with a record of not having been defeated in their last nine starts. Since bowing to Detroit, 1-0, on December 6, they have gained five victories and four ties, and in these nine games they have permitted only five goals. No foe has scored more than one goal on Stuart, London's star goalie, during this success string.

In two previous meetings with the Tecumsehs, the Jackets gained a victory and a tie, but the visitors probably will rule favorites tonight. The Reidmen will have to swing into action without the services of their captain, Tory Gregg, who will be out of the lineup for about 10 days with a leg injury which he sustained here Thursday night as the Jackets defeated the Cleveland Indians in an overtime game, 2-1.

MUSCLE SEVERED

Dr. Sable, under whose care Gregg has been placed, reports that a muscle in the calf of the Jacket leader's right leg is severed. Dunning accidentally inflicted the injury on Tory in a wild scrimmage in the second period.

Coach Charley Reid today was busy considering front line changes necessitated by Gregg's absence. He said that Doc Romnes, Pittsburgh newcomer, who showed up extremely well in making his debut as a Jacket against the Indians, probably would be shifted to center on the starting front line, with Earl Miller at right wing, and Ty Arbour in the left lane.

All members of the local squad other than Gregg came through the rough battle with Cleveland in good shape, and no changes in the lineup of backfielders is contemplated.

MILLER, FIELDS STAR

Earl Miller and Whitey Fields shared the hero role in the victory over the Indians. Miller scored on an assist from Ty Arbour in the second period to match Gray's second-period tally for Cleveland, and Fields converted a pass from Cam Proudlock into the victory goal early in the extra period.

Free-for-all fist fights, in which Fraser and Gray were headliners, so steamed up the capacity crowd that the Cleveland skaters had to have police protection in quitting the rink and the city.

Tonight's game should produce more stiff body checking, as London favors this style of play. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		London
Cuk	G	Stuart
Bertelli	D	Hinks
Fraser	D	Holway
Romnes	C	Carrigan
Miller	W	Quenneville
Arbour	W	Neville

Spares—Pittsburgh, Proudlock, Matte, Fields, Barton, Loraine, Halliday, White. London, Hoard, Pettinger, Groh, Schneider, Reinikka, Hedinger, Loughlin.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF THURSDAY: CORPSE FINED FOR CARRYING A GUN—About 45 years ago a dead man was found by the peace officers of Boerne, Tex., and on the body was a loaded pistol and a money purse containing $100. They held the body for a possible claimant, and, when none appeared, they decided to fine the corpse $100 for carrying a pistol, and then took the money to cover funeral expenses. THE TREE THAT EATS OYSTERS—Melville Clark, of Syracuse, N. Y., planted a palm tree in his store about 20 years ago, but found that it did not grow as it should. He was informed that it was of the variety growing on the sea shore of the Canary Islands, where the roots are covered with oysters. Clark then dug a small channel around the palm and put oysters on the roots. They disappeared rapidly, and the tree began to grow healthily, fed by a quart of oysters twice a year.

ARMOUR LEADS MIAMI OPEN

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Tommy Armour, British open champion, scored a sizzling 33-35—68, five under par, to take a commanding lead of 159 players at the quarter mark yesterday of the 72-hole $2,500 Miami open golf tournament. He led Len Mattson, St. Paul pro, his nearest competitor, by two strokes.

F. Deering, Chicago, scored 71, but split third place honors with Henri Ciuci, Mill River, Conn.

Hank Miller, La Porte, Ind., Ralph Kingsrud, Fargo, N. D., and Wild Bill Mehlhorn, New York, had 73's, while Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., defending champion, had to be content with a 74. Lee Chas., Miami, was low amateur, as he tied with Turnesa and three others at this mark.

E. Vincent Eldred, of the Highland Country Club, Pittsburgh, recorded a 76.

EAST OUTSLIDES WEST, 6-0

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Gridiron stars from east of the Mississippi River outslid their Western foes, 6-0, yesterday by scoring a touchdown in the first quarter of the annual San Francisco Shrine charity football game.

In rain-soaked Kezar Stadium, the West made a gallant fight, and twice by a stubborn goal-line defense kept the powerful Eastern ball carriers from digging their cleats in scoring turf after advancing to the five-yard line. But as for a Western offensive threat—there was none.

MACMURDO STARS

The West squad was rich in talent at passing and the wide-open style of play, but never had a chance to use it.

The field was soaked at the start of the game and rain started falling soon afterwards. Players quickly worked the middle of the gridiron into a quagmire that gave little footing for passers and runners.

The Herculean strength of the Eastern line was the most brilliant spark of a game that lacked thrills for the spectators. Pitted against the best forwards of Western elevens, such giants as Hickman, Marvil, Hoffman, MacMurdo and Chalmers dominated the game. Time after time they blasted holes through which Hinkle, Russell and Morton gained momentum that carried them well into the West secondary before going down.

EAST TEAM STRONG

Ten first downs for the East as against one for the West, that on a penalty, is a truthful representation of the comparative offensive strength of the teams. The East advanced a net total of 138 yards, while the West gained just 10 more yards than its backs lost on the slippery battle ground.

Babcock Buffalo To Be Food For Windber Fete

SOMERSET, Pa., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—A buffalo bull, weighing 1,700 pounds, killed on the reserve of County Commissioner E. V. Babcock, in Allegheny County, has been brought here.

The buffalo will feature a dinner of the Windber Sportsmen's Association January 20.

Leland W. Walker, Guy Critchfield, Walter E. Jones and Dr. R. E. Colvin, all of Somerset, saw the kill. Harold Walker, son of Leland Walker, shot the animal on Babcock's invitation.

JAFFEE NEW SKATING KING

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Irving Jaffee, of New York, a star of the 1928 United States Olympic speed skating team and a leading candidate this year, cleaned up the men's division of the Middle Atlantic speed skating championships yesterday and won the Donahue Memorial Trophy.

Elsie Muller, of the Ice Club of New York, succeeded her teammate, Lillian Corke, as women's champion, after they skated a record heat in the 880-yard race and both collapsed after the finish.

Lloyd Gunther, of Detroit, won the 220-yard championship in 18 3-5 seconds, only one-fifth of a second short of the world record.

Jaffee clinched the title by winning the half-mile and mile races.

Miss Muller and Miss Corke each won one of the three women's events before they finished even in the 880. Miss Muller, also a former champion, took the 220-yard sprint in 23 4-5 seconds and finished third behind Miss Corke for the points that gave her the title.

HECHT RETAINS NET CROWN

BALTIMORE, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—The junior singles tennis crown was won by Mark Hecht, University of Pennsylvania star, for the second consecutive year yesterday as the final in the national indoor singles tennis tourney was played off.

Hecht swamped Ramey Donovan, Fordham University, in straight sets, 7-5, 6-0, 6-4.

Howard Schein, of West Side High School, Newark, N. J., created a stir when he defeated Gilbert Hunt, Jr., of Eastern High School, Washington, D. C., to win the national boys' indoor singles championship, 6-1, 8-6.

Bernard Friedman, of West Philadelphia High School, and Lester Kabacoff, University of Pennsylvania, captured the national junior doubles tourney by defeating Giles Verstraten, of McBurney School, New York, and Albert Law, Jr., New York University, 7-5, 8-6, 4-6, 1-6, 6-3.

In the boys' doubles final, Frank Kaufman, of Friends' School, Baltimore, and George B. Dunn, St. Joseph's School, Philadelphia, triumphed over Lyman Crossman, Jr., of White Plains, N. Y., and Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, 6-4, 6-3.

West Scores Kayo Over Joe Walters

FRANKLIN, Pa., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Tiger (Joe) West, of Pittsburgh, scored a technical knockout over Joe Walters, of Springfield, O., in the seventh round here yesterday. West weighed 158, Walters 161.

Joey Speigal, of Uniontown, 143, outpointed Matty Oldach, of Erie, 141, in six rounds.

Eddie Hebner, of Pittsburgh, 141, outpointed Joe Boler, of Erie, 141, in another six-rounder and Eddie Flick, of New Castle, 136, and Elsie Mott, of Franklin, 143, drew in four rounds.

TARTANS WHIP BUFFALO U.

BUFFALO, Jan. 2.—Carnegie Tech's basketeers swept through the University of Buffalo for a 49-30 victory here last night. The Skibos led the procession, 17 to 14, at half-time, and gained, rather than lost ground, in the second half.

Bob Smith led the way for the Pittsburghers. He scored eight baskets and five free throws, 21 points, before being removed in the closing minutes when Coach Hogan took advantage of his opportunity to give the reserve a bit of experience. His accuracy under the basket was mainly responsible for the margin of the victory.

Eddie Malanowicz, Buffalo center, kept the Bulls in the running for a half. He scored six of Buffalo's first seven points, then passed to Monk Levine at either minutes to send the Blue ahead at 10-3.

At this stage the Tartans' attack began to function and Jack now's basket, the first field goal of the game for the visitors started the rally.

Stentz got away from Malowicz to score under the basket and Smith shot two pretty ones from the floor to send the Tartans five points ahead three minutes later.

Buffalo went to pieces in the second half before the accurate passing and all-around floor work of Carnegie, Smith scoring three straight with a free throw tossed in for good measure. Three Buffalo players went out on fouls as they strove desperately to check an avalanche. The lineup:

PANTHERS SET FOR HARD TILT TONIGHT

By H. C. Carlson

Pitt Basketball Coach.

Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2.—All rested up and ready to go, the Panthers hope to continue their winning ways by taking over the University of Southern California's Trojans here tonight. The Men of Troy won the national football championship yesterday, with our Pitt boys looking on—but we hope to take them at basketball in this evening's setto.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

The Pitt basketeers have had two great days, and it will be hard to go back to their regular body-beating tonight, but they can be depended to put up plenty of resistance before they board the train for four nights and three days before they get back to home sweet home.

TROJANS SUPERIOR

Tulane deserves all the fine things said and written about them, and with this must go the credit of Southern California of being superior.

Glover is one of the best open-field runners I have seen since Tommy Davies, and Zimmerman is a good back and a great passer. Dalrymple is truly unorthodox and quite frequently does the wrong thing at the wrong time, as well as doing it at the right time.

Two touchdowns went right over him, but frequently he looked like a great boy. Southern Cal has the biggest team all around I have ever seen, but it was just another game for them, and they couldn't put any fire in their play.

WELL-COACHED TEAM

I can appreciate the pride that swelled up in those Tulane rooters when their smaller players put up such a courageous fight against greater physical odds and used only 15 men in the game.

Bierman showed a smart, well-coached team, and he is a wonderful chap, quiet, retiring and almost bashful.

Both teams shift their lines and backfields after the huddle, and before they start their plays, and this added to the spectacular games played by each.

Tulane's chief protection was their ability to keep possession of the ball, and they made more first downs and gained more ground. But they only put the score in the records, and so Howard Jones has lots of credit coming to him for a rough, tough season.

The Pitt boys were guests of Los Angeles Pitt alumni at a steak dinner and a show Thursday night.

TROJANS CAPTURE NATIONAL GRID CROWN

Tri-State Intercollegiate Boxing Tourney May Be Held Here in March

TULANE ELEVEN GOES DOWN FIGHTING

PASADENA, Jan. [illegible] (AP)—On the sod of Rose Bowl [illegible] intersectional football [illegible] recorded the South's [illegible]

A University of Southern California team [illegible] before 85,000 persons yesterday scoring a Tulane eleven [illegible]

The spectacular battle [illegible] West the nation's [illegible]

The most brilliant [illegible] star was Ellis Pinckert, [illegible] America star of two years [illegible] blocking halfback [illegible] carrier for a day. He [illegible] the margin of victory [illegible] touchdowns [illegible] succession [illegible]

After setting the pace [illegible] the opening period [illegible] seemed out some of its own [illegible] cine in the form of a [illegible] pass. Orville Mohler, [illegible] Clark, which gave Coach Howard Jones' eleven its first scoring chance.

SPARLING SCORES FIRST

Massing interference in front of Galus Shaver, the Trojans reported him to the six-yard line on a determined thrust.

Here Ray Sparling, left end, was called back for a reverse play, [illegible] circumstances. Johnny Baker's placement made the extra point, for a [illegible] all important lead at half time.

The third period was young [illegible] when Pinckert first scored. Tulane had attempted two drives and the Trojans one, when Shaver broke loose to place the ball on the 28-yard line. Ellis was given the ball on his one play, a reverse over the weak side, and without interference he cut through tackle [illegible] to score untouched.

On Three plays later he repeated, almost from the same spot. Carrying the ball like a satchel, he stiff-armed Wop Glover away to score again.

TULANE MAKES DRIVE

The Greenies then started a sustained drive of 75 yards in 10 plays from the kickoff to the 16-yard line. Two plays later Zimmerman tossed a sharp short pass to Vernon Haynes, over the center of the line for a touchdown.

Again the Greenies scored after Mohler muffed the ball on his 15-yard line. Zimmerman threw a long pass which a Trojan back deflected slightly into Capt. Jerry Dalrymple's hands, placing the ball on the three-yard line. Glover slipped across on his double reverse.

Dalrymple lived up to his all-America name and his teammate on the flank, Lefty Haynes, was only a step behind. Troy's famed spinners through the center failed utterly as John Scafide, stocky guard, and W. P. Lodrigues, center, staved off the drives. The lineup:

U. S. C.		Tulane
Sparling	L. E.	Haynes
Dewar	L. T.	Dougherty
Baker	L. G.	Scafide

Pope to Compete For National Crown

Pittsburgh will be represented in the National Professional Squash Racquets championships to be held next week at the Downtown Club in New York, by Benedict Pope, squash professional at the Keystone Athletic Club. It is Pope's second year in national competition. His first competition took place in 1931 in Boston, where he reached the finals, being defeated by Jack Summers, of Boston, in a close four-game match. In a return exhibition match here later that year, Pope defeated Summers.

GIZZY-BERNARD BATTLE

BATTLING GIZZY ROGER BERNARD

Photo typical of action throughout 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden last night which Gizzy won, although, contrary to his customary aggressive style, he spent most of his time on the run and covering from Bernard's efforts to get inside and make a fight of it.

WOOD REACHES PRO FINAL

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Charles M. Wood of the Fairview Country Club, Elmsford, N. Y., scored the first major upset of the National professional indoor tennis championship last night as he led the way into the final round with a hard-fought victory over Albert Burke, Irish professional, who was placed second on the seeded list.

Wood, seeded fifth, won the long drawn out match by scores of 9-7, 10-8, 1-6, 4-6, 7-5.

Wood also scored a minor upset when he defeated Paul Heston, of Washington, D. C., fourth seeded player, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0, in a quarter-final match.

Vincent Richards, former pro champion, Albert Burke, the Irish star, and J. Emmett Pare, of Chicago, seeded one, two and three respectively, marched through their fourth-round matches without the loss of a set.

Richards dropped only two games as he defeated Russell Harned, of Newark, N. J., 6-0, 6-1, 6-1. Burke turned back Thomas Worthley, of New York, 6-1, 6-0, 6-0. Pare had the toughest battle, but defeated J. Basil Maguire, of New York, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

EAST OUTSLIDES WEST, 6-0

West and two by the East, none was completed. Merle Hufford's punts, most of them carrying more than 40 yards, provided occasional sparkle, but for the most part potential brilliance of both teams was shrouded by the dull, dripping skies. The lineup:

Marriage Is Not a Game for Cowards or Pikers

Why is she afraid to marry?

She loves him. She has waited for him for two troubled years. And now all the objections have been overcome, and the handicaps abolished, but still she hesitates. Why?

It isn't that he's flighty or that they don't get along like a million together. He's steady and regular, and saves his money, yet

She just can't bring herself to take that trip up the aisle with him. What's wrong?

"Dear Sally:

"I wonder if you can help me find what is wrong with me. I hope you can for I don't seem to be able to figure it out yourself.

PARENTS OBJECTED

"Two years ago I met a boy I adore. It was love at first sight for both of us I think for since that time we have never seen enough of each other. I have been with him nearly every night except when he had to work and I know that he has never cheated on me once.

"This month I was to have been engaged to him for we have been. We planned on getting married last October but he lost his job and we had to postpone. My mother and dad objected to him at first because he drinks—but so does my mother, and so do a lot of people. And now we've seen so many homes wrecked by liquor that neither of us wants to ever taste it. He won't even take me to a party where it is served.

"Well, when my parents saw that that didn't cool my love they said he had to have $500 before we married. We agreed to wait, but that didn't satisfy them. Every time we went to a show together my father would insult me right in front of him and my brother, happy. The third was awful. Dalrymple: I should that I saw Amerend below bid and played at four spades the declarer going down three tricks. The first question is, could Z have made four against an opening lead of hearts? The second question is whether the hand should not have been played at clubs.

When A led a winning heart just as the 99 per cent of players would have done, Z trumped without thought. B wisely ducked his 10 under A's king to avoid blocking the later run of hearts, which eventually gained two tricks for his side. Having trumped the first lead, Z laid down his three remaining spades, expecting to drop all opposing trumps instead of which he left the long spade in A's hand and a set-up heart suit of five cards. This spelled ruin for the declarer. A trumped the second lead of Y-Z's established clubs, then A took his five hearts—six tricks in all defeating Z by three tricks.

Had Z stopped to consider matters he readily could have made game, but no more; he could have won 4 spades, 5 clubs, and his ace of diamonds, just 10 tricks total. As Z had in any event to lose three diamonds, all he had to do was to discard three losing diamonds from his own hand upon the first three leads of hearts. If A led a fourth heart Y could have trumped, saving Z's spades to pull opposing trumps. If A led anything except a heart, either Y or Z must have won the trick and spread their cards for the remaining tricks. Bad strategy alone lost game.

As a matter of fact Z's opening bid should have been 1-Club (not 1-Spade). A would have bid his 2-Hearts over the 1-Club, just as he did over the 1-Spade, Y would have bid 3-Clubs, B would have said 3-Hearts, then Z could have bid 3-Spades (showing by his secondary bid that clubs were longer than spades). Had A bid 4-Hearts (as he did over the 3-Spades), Y would have bid 5-Clubs, and nothing could have stopped them going game. Then Z could have ruffed the opening lead of hearts, and three rounds of clubs would have dropped all opposing trumps.

Four spade tricks would have followed upon the last of which one of Y's diamonds would have been discarded. Z would have taken his ace of diamonds, he would have given opponents one diamond, trumped another diamond in dummy, and given opponents his fourth diamond as their last trick.

Bad Strategy Loses Game

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When walking keep the toes directed straight ahead. To turn them out is to put a heavy strain on the muscles of legs and ankles, to deform the feet and to unite knock knees. Have a good, strong foot hold, which means that you'd better chuck those spiked heels into the trash basket and buy shoes that are designed for comfortable locomotion.

The powder pad is a menace unless it is laundered frequently. It gathers dust and grime, digs them into the pores of the freshly washed skin surface. There is a way out. Get a glass container and fill with balls of absorbent cotton or squares of gauze. Use one and throw into the discard. Powder should be fluffed onto the skin, never ground in.

What about rose-petal blushes? Nobody has them any more, not real ones, just synthetic glows. Maybe when the gay night life proves a bore, girls take to their beds at an early hour, civilization returns to quieter, less stressful, more normal living, we can chuck the old rouge compacts and grow our own. Cheeks go wan when a gal doesn't have enough exercise or fresh air, when she doesn't eat properly, when she cuts down the old rule of nine hours sleep every night. Time was when rosy complexions were common blessings. No more. Life too strenuous.

Take a searchlight view of feminine heads in a theater audience and you'll come to the conclusion that a campaign for the relief of suffering and neglected back hair is in order. Practically every woman finds a becoming and chic arrangement of forelocks, but those rear ends are not all that they should be. Too bad since coiffure designers have clever offerings—puffs in groups, little rolls with curly tips, braids that march hand in hand across the nape of the neck, arrays of ringlets that you can remove during the neck scrubbing fiesta.

Household Hints

For frying olive oil is much superior to lard or suet.

Rub papier mache articles with beeswax or olive oil. This will keep the surface of such articles in excellent condition.

For washing dainty handkerchiefs add a few lemon rinds to the water and boil it with the handkerchiefs, and they will become snowy white.

Wine stains on colored materials should be sponged lightly with lukewarm suds containing a little ammonia, then rubbed very carefully so as not to injure gloss or color, and ironed on the wrong side.

Malted milk is improved if made up with ice cream.

Before applying polish to a grate or stove that has burned red on top through overheating, rub well with a cut lemon.

After using an egg whisk, wash it thoroughly in cold water and then put in the oven for a short time. This will prevent it from rusting.

One mother has a white rubber stair tread that she puts on the bottom of the tub before the year-old baby is put in to bathe. He sits on this and is much more firmly planted than on the slippery porcelain.

TWO UNWISE WOMEN -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

For ONE is asking for advice about her husband and the OTHER is giving it. The OTHER is saying, "I wouldn't live with him a minute, my dear."

Every woman knows her own mind and heart about whether she wants to leave her husband or not. Never ask any other woman what to do about the tangles that you and John get into. Never follow the advice of a woman who has been badly hurt in her own great love-adventure. She has brewed bitterness in her heart, lost many glamorous beliefs, learned to make fun to cover up. No matter what your story, her counsel is likely to be always the same—RENO! She will read more into your story than perhaps is there. She will see a cyclone where perhaps it's just a stiff gale. Maybe you are just under a passing cloud; but to a hurt and hardened woman you are lying under the tragic, life-long eclipse that put her own hours and days in dreadful darkness. YOU yourself know what you really WANT to do about John and you. You know just how much to blame John is—just how good he is—and how wrong and how right—just where your two little feet stand too—what you have done and not done. No one knows better than you—and John.

Ask yourself—not Reno Rita. Be sorry about her—but don't ask her what to do about your whole life.

Don't ask any one in the world—but perhaps some OLD man and woman—happily married!

And don't GIVE a pretty lady such advice as to put the scissors to the love-knot she tied one day. Do you remember the story of the man who climbed the fence to help a lady whose husband was chasing her round and round the mulberry bush WITH A STICK? The lady fell upon him, and as she routed him out of the yard with thumps and scratches (he lost his hat!) she cried: "How dare you hit my husband?" Put your finger aside your nose and think, Rita, before you agree with Ruth that her husband is perfectly "terrible." If she changes her mind later she will dislike you forever. And if she leaves her John because you told her to—you may be unable to get it off your mind.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Mary's Verbal Barbs Anger Noel

Philip Veritzen brought all his histrionic talent into play as he heard Lillian's final ultimatum that we could not receive him until the next afternoon for the purpose of going over the three acts of my play which he supposed were finished.

"'Needs must,'" he quoted, with a pointed look at Lillian. "And I'll bow meekly to the yoke. What is the earliest hour you will be free to receive me?"

"Three o'clock," Lillian replied promptly and unblushingly. "We have a late luncheon."

"That will give us very little time before dinner." Mr. Veritzen started to frown again and then thought better of it. "So be it!" he intoned finally. "I shall be on the doorstep exactly at 3."

"And we'll draw the latch to the second," Lillian answered promptly, and I knew she was gloating over the additional time she had managed to secure for our strenuous endeavor to get the third act in shape for Mr. Veritzen to see.

"Thank you," he said a bit dryly. "It will be necessary for you to be prompt if we're to get anything done. And now, I think I shall collect my family and go on to the hotel."

"Your family!" Lillian echoed, wrinkling her nose at him. "Don't go and tell me Phil that you're contemplating matrimony."

"You know my dear, that unless I can poison your husband conveniently, I never shall marry," he said, and left us upon the sally, moving toward the other end of the room where Dicky and Harry Underwood were dancing with Avis Arlen and her mother. This was the order I told myself, in which anyone would refer to the two strangers. The daughter had a stronger personality—though a more disagreeable one—than her mother.

Lillian made a little moue at his retreating back.

"Phil may not feel old," she said, "but his line is a bit hoary over the temples. But come along, let's tag along with him. I want to be near by when he collects Noel, don't you?"

"Indeed, yes," I echoed with a surreptitious look toward the corner where Mary and Noel stood facing each other like fencers on guard. Rather Mary was on guard, for she was silently watchful. But Noel was voluble, wrathfully so, and the look on his face was grim.

Lillian's glance followed mine and she gave me a warning nudge.

"Better shorten up that round," she advised, "and get Noel away before he explodes. I'll double for an old-fashioned lightning-rod and deflect the Julian wrath till you join us."

I nodded and walked toward the betrothed couple who patently for the moment were chafing under their bonds. I was just in time to hear Noel say savagely:

"I've stood all of this nonsense I can. Are you going to stay here where I can see you, or are you determined to leave me flat?"

"That sounds discourteous to your friends," Mary said, with a detached little air of reproof. "I am sure you will be left anything but 'flat.' You will be very busy and amused, I am sure. I should only hamper your style if I stuck around. I might even yawn, when you were reading Whitman, and where would I be? Branded forever as a lowbrow who——"

She did not get the chance to finish. Noel so forcibly and profanely consigned to perdition the Good Gray Poet whom Avis Arlen had claimed as part of her literary creed, that the sound of his raucous voice drowned Mary's airy nonsense. I was startled, for Noel, unlike Dicky and Harry, never uses profanity, at least where women can hear him. But I knew he had been prodded with red-hot lance tips until his nerves were raw, and I wondered if Mary would consider him punished sufficiently, and stop baiting him. I knew, however, that underneath her airy badinage she was as angry as was Noel, and as hurt. She simply had better control of her nerves than he, and would be able to avoid betraying her emotional turmoil until she was safe in her room.

Noel flung himself away from Mary as he finished his outburst, and saw me. His face, white with rage, was suddenly crimsoned with chagrin.

"Oh! I am so sorry," he stammered. "Please forgive me. I did not mean——" he floundered helplessly.

"He means," Mary explained painstakingly, "that he didn't intend you to hear him cuss. All his astonishing efforts in that direction were meant for me. But I hold no grudge, and I'm going to heap the well known coals of fire upon my adversary's head by giving him some good advice. You'd better beat it pronto, old dear. Both your father and Miss Arlen are headed this way."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Care of Skin and Proper Diet May Banish Pimples

Blemishes of the skin, not so serious as many other afflictions, cause untold mental anxiety. Pimples are often difficult to get rid of and at times resist all treatment.

Dr. Copeland

Pimples or acne, as this disease of the skin is called, is a condition influenced by many factors. It is not a "blood" condition, nor is it due to fast living. Not always can it be attributed to improper food; but improper food, constipation, lack of exercise, lack of fresh air and lack of fresh vegetables and fruit must be considered as related to this condition.

The diet deserves first consideration. Individuals suffering from pimples should scowl at sweets, rich desserts and pastries. Alcohol, chocolates, spiced foods, rich meats, peppers and condiments are things to avoid. The daily diet should contain an abundance of fresh vegetables and fruits.

It is important that the bowels be kept open. Any tendency to constipation should be overcome. To assist in this there should be regular exercise.

Next in importance is the care of the skin. Anybody who is careless about washing the face and hands is likely to have this trouble. The face should be scrubbed with soap and warm water. In washing the face, it is not enough merely to splash a little water over the face and then dry it.

The skin of the face and hands is exposed to dirt throughout the day. In order to remove the dirt, thorough cleansing is necessary. This can be accomplished only if the face is well scrubbed. Thorough face cleansing should be done at least twice a day.

It is advisable to apply cold cream and rub it off with a rough cloth. You will be amazed at the amount of dirt that comes off your face.

The soap used should have real cleansing properties and should be mild. That is, it should not be irritating, but should actually soothe the skin. Often soaps that are too alkaline in content will irritate the skin, particularly if used with hard water.

Warm water is recommended in preference to cold water. Dirt is more quickly dissolved in warm water than in cold water. For its stimulating and tonic effect, it is wise to finish the cleansing by using cold water.

Often the pimples of acne become infected. This is usually due to negligence on the part of the individual, who scratches his face and infects the sore spot. If the pimple becomes infected, it is always best to apply warm boric acid solutions and keep the part as clean as possible.

What a Child May Do?

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

A mother was severely criticized the other day. Said one critic: "The very idea! She lets John take that clock apart and put it together and play with it by the hour. That's just teaching a child to destroy things!"

The critic neglected to mention a fact which has a great deal of bearing upon the child—of his daily searching and prying into the interior of the clock she mentioned. John's mother, when she'd made the discovery that her son had an overpowering urge to see the "innards" of a clock, had found an old one which had long ceased to function and given it to him with the understanding that he might dissect it at will.

The critic of John's mother seemed to fear that the little boy might go through life ripping clocks apart every time he saw one. But he WON'T. For, along with the gift of the derelict clock, the mother had made it emphatically known that it was the only clock the child was to experiment with. And after taking this one apart the child said: "Gee, mom, it takes a lot of work to get one of these things together so it will run right, doesn't it?"

Wisely, the mother sat down and talked over with the boy the knowledge it takes, the skill and precision required to make clocks, and the boy emerged from the conversation and his experimenting with a very healthy respect for all timepieces.

The trouble with most parents in deciding what requests to grant when children are inquisitive and experimental, is that they don't want to take the time to teach the child JUDGMENT in connection with the activity.

One might as well decide never to give a boy a hammer for fear he'll hit the baby on the head with it; or one might say a child could never be given a piece of cake because a whole cake would make him sick, as to clamp down and say "No", when a possibly unusual request (such as that of taking a clock apart), springs up in the home.

Children can be allowed to do a million things IF we're willing to pause a few seconds and inculcate the principle of selection and discrimination (which, in the end, is but good judgment) as to WHAT objects may be touched and examined and which must be left alone.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Passing Refreshments

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please tell me if it is correct for a lady to speak, when walking down the street with a boy friend, and he speaks to someone whom she does not know?

2. If a boy friend brings you a box of candy and you have company, who should take the first and second piece?

3. Also, when passing refreshments, to whom should you pass the first piece?

LUCILLE.

1. No, the girl does not speak.

2. Open the box of candy and pass it to your guests, offering the first piece to the woman who is, say, the oldest member of the group or the most important member, say, the woman who would, at a dinner, be the guest of honor. Pass it to the other women, and then to the men.

3. The same rule would apply.

Gift for a Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly let me know what would be appropriate for my husband and me to send our doctor, who is ill in the hospital? We would like to send him a token of some sort. S.

Since the doctor will probably have a great many flowers sent to him, and since flowers aren't too easy to care for in a hospital, I suggest that you send him a perfectly chosen book, for him to read during his convalescence. Or a group of the latest magazines, such as you are sure he would appreciate, are a good gift for the hospital, since it is easy to turn over the pages and rather casually read.

Engraving Silverware

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Last Christmas I received a beautiful set of silverware from my husband, which I want engraved. Please tell me what initials to use?—F. N.

There are two choices for you. The initials usually used for the marking of silver (when it is not done before marriage), are the initials of the first and last name of the maiden name before the initial of the last name of the married name. That is . . . . F. S. N. (or if you prefer, you may omit the initial of the last name of your maiden name, and use F. N.

The alternative is the use of only one initial, the initial of the last name of the married name . . . N.

Which you choose depends on your wish, and also on the design of the silver. The pattern may be one that will harmonize best with one initial, and that, say, a lovely Script initial. Or the three initials may be done in a combination that will live charmingly and most appropriately with the design of the silver.

Service

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. At a cocktail party to whom does the maid go first to serve the cocktails, the hostess, or the other ladies of the party?

D. R.

1. She serves first the women guests, and then the hostess.

DEFLATION END SEEN WITH NEW YEAR

Financial Analyst Asserts Outlook Better Than For Several Years Past

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. — After the recent deluge of liquidation, what?

The question is of surpassing public interest on the first business day of the new year.

Obviously, the banks, which have been moving toward liquidity, will not have to keep up the process of disgorging themselves of investments at the abnormal pace which has prevailed in recent months.

Mr. Rukeyser.

It is estimated that the banks have divested themselves of a billion and a half dollars of securities and security loans in the last four months, explaining the extraordinary pressure against the bond market.

Such liquidation is a measure of the extent that deflation has taken place, showing that part of curren' social income has been used to wipe out indebtedness rather than for constructive, job creating purchases of consumption or capital goods.

When that process of wiping out excessive indebtedness is over, a larger portion of the social income can be devoted to constructive purchases, and business and employment will improve.

According to one economic theory, economic health will be restored when the savings fund balances investments. Some observers think that that point of equilibrium is at hand, or nearby.

One school of economists, including John Maynard Keynes, explains crises as caused by a lack of equilibrium between savings and investment. When savings are not followed by operations of business men, the savings are wasted, as far as the community's wealth is concerned, according to Mr. Keynes.

E. C. Howard, financial analyst, in Barron's, concludes:

"Taking into consideration the greatly accelerated deflation of the period, June to October, it is apparent that the process is now nearly completed. The outlook for the immediate future is better than for several years past. In fact, it is now safe to assert that the domestic business and financial situation is or soon will be 'fundamentally sound.'"

Such optimistic new year messages are all the more reassuring when accompanied by statistical demonstrations as Mr. Harwood's was.

Wurlitzer Employes To Observe Birthday

Pittsburgh employes of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company tonight will unite with members of the organization from the Atlantic to the Pacific in celebrating the beginning of the 76th year of the company. The celebration here will be a dinner and will be in charge of Harry E. Raines, general manager of the Pittsburgh branch.

Race Suicide Held Result of Life In Big Cities

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. —(INS)—Modern civilization is perhaps unconsciously causing race suicide in the highly specialized existence of the present American and European city. This theory was advanced by Dr. Jerome Davis of Yale University, speaking before the American Sociological Society.

He presented evidence to show that the declining birth rate of the past century may be attributed to the lack of contact with ultra-violet radiations from the sun due to the change in modes of living.

Dr. Davis has been carrying on lengthy experiments with mice, pointing out that these rodents were very similar to human beings.

FAMINE PERIL IN FLOOD AREA

GLENDORA, Miss., Jan. 2.—(AP)—Crumbling levees still held flood waters out of the towns of the Mississippi delta today, but the danger of famine brought a new fear to the refugees.

Convicts and farm laborers continued to pile sandbanks on the barriers against the steadily rising waters as provisions dwindled. Meanwhile, Red Cross workers surveyed the flood area to determine the extent of relief work needed.

Tallahatchie, Quitman and Panola counties lay under an expanding flood of waters, swelled by recent recurring rains as torrents washed down below Glendora into Northern Leflore County.

Boats were held in readiness here to convey Tallahatchie lowland dwellers out of the valley in event of a general wiping out of levees. A thousand convicts were hard at work on the system from Swan Lake, Sumner and Webb past Glendora Bend to Phippa, in Northern Leflore County.

LOSES AT LOVE, KILLS SELF

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Jan. 2.—(AP)—En engagement ring and a note directing its return to a jeweler told of a failure at love which caused Roland Benjamin Schaefer, 25, instructor at the University of Arkansas, to slip away from a New Year's watch party in the home where he roomed and kill himself yesterday.

The young woman he had taken to the party, and said to have been the object of his affections, had left shortly before with another escort, Kinney Holt, former star football and basketball player at the university. Before leaving, she and Schaefer talked for several minutes.

Her name was withheld by authorities, who also declined to make public the contents of another note and poem written by Schaefer before he fired a bullet into his head. However, it was learned the young woman was a stenographer in the business office of the university.

Film Operator Dies In Theater Fire

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Jan. 2.—(AP)—L. L. Hickson, 27, motion picture machine operator, was burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed the projection room of the Dorothy Theater. Sam Parish, owner of the theater, was burned slightly as he vainly tried to rescue the operator.

The afternoon show had just ended and none of the theater patrons knew of the fire until they had left the building.

Nevis Takes Opportunity to Pay Visit to Ailing Mother at Home

CHAPTER XIII

There was nothing Bill asserted himself to his flirtation with Linda Hayes. It wasn't even really a flirtation. And Hayes was a good scout, if a dozen or so years older than his wife. But it was pleasant to change your dusty, sweaty riding things for cool linen and to drive over to the Hayes' very charming house and stretch your legs under a civilized table and have a pretty woman tell you you are wasting your time in this God-forgotten spot. And to have Hayes wondering if, later, he couldn't find something for you to do with his company, a better job perhaps. Bill was, it may be unconsciously, playing the old game again—ingratiating himself with the influential wife—while the husband sat by and permitted himself to be influenced. Once Bill had had bonds to sell; now he had himself and his services to dispose of. Nevis watching the shift, it isn't any different. Wherever you go it's the same.

But she liked Linda. She was forced to admit to herself that there wasn't any harm in her. Just a soft, rather sweet little person, inclined to giggle and dreadfully bored by the turn of fate which has sent her husband down to the Island to manage a sugar concern which, the year before had been on the verge of going under. But despite Nevis' silent vows to herself she said to Bill one night, pushing the damp hair back from her forehead: "What's the idea of playing the game with Linda Hayes? Looking for the engineering job over there?"

He said angrily:

"Well, why not? It would be a darned sight better than this one. Promises in this concern haven't materialized and we've been here over a year with no raise in pay and no prospect of any, and as far as I can see we'll be here the rest of our lives unless I do something about it. Walter Mason is all right, but either he doesn't give a darn about us or else he has less drag than I thought he had. Hayes is a good scout. And if you call being decently civil to his wife playing a game why, I suppose I am."

AN IMPROVEMENT

In the early spring of that year they moved bag and baggage to the other plantation on which Bill was made chief engineer at the princely salary of $200 a month. Hayes said discussing it with those close to him: "He's good. He's saved the Guayabal company money. He told me of the things he's done. Well, we can afford to have a man like that on our payroll." And, secretly, he thought, and it will give Linda a new lease on life, having people she likes around her and all. She's been so damned snooty with most of the other women here I've had my hands full trying to keep peace."

In the new job there was a better house and a furnished one into the bargain. Bill was given a car and a driver, and Nevis had a maid of all work, a little brown dimpled thing with whom, now that Nevis had her Spanish under control, it was easy enough to get along. And there were several other women resident in the settlement who were a distinct improvement over the majority of others she had met. And by mid-summer she had realized that here was Westlynne on a small scale and in a different setting.

Parties. Little dinners. Cocktail, or rather long gin-swizzle parties. Dances. Bridge afternoons, when the husbands were working. Talk of clothes. Trips to San Juan, half a dozen of them going along to make up the party. And Linda assuming rather possessive ways toward her new enthusiasm and Bill with much of his old manner back again.

Nevis wrote to Della frantically: "Buy me some clothes. They don't have to be expensive. In fact, they can't be. But send me a dress a month—chiffons if you can get them, or organdies. I'll pay you as we go along. You'll save my life if you do."

She got out the ribbon-tied glass jars and bottles and pallet. She sent for special water waving combs to put back some of the flat waves in her curly hair, and for manicuring sets. She had to keep up, she told herself grimly.

NOT A HARDSHIP

But keeping up is not a matter of good resolutions only. She told herself angrily that she must be crazy. This wasn't hardship. She had a roof over her head and food of sorts on the table. She had light and something to cook with and transportation and civilized neighbors. It wasn't living under primitive conditions at all. She wasn't out in a jungle with Bill with nothing to depend on save their wits. Yet she conceded that in a way a jungle might have served her better. Here, there were outside contacts to distract them from each other and there was just enough of civilization to make them wish for more. At home, observing herself slipping, she might have gone to a beauty shop and taken a course of treatments, bought the most becoming hat she ever had, tried a new hair cut, take some form of exercise, hired a competent person to look after her house and put herself through a course of rest treatments. Even without money. For there is such a thing as credit, even if it doesn't extend beyond three or six months. In the jungle, she thought, every evidence of civilization would be so far away you'd have to put it out of your mind. Here it seemed just around the corner, yet was not.

The climate was getting on her nerves. She had always reacted unpleasantly to heat. Here, it was hot all the time, a damp, oppressive heat that, combined with the fever in her blood, took it out of her. Changing to fresh clothes, she would no more than walk across the floor than she was dripping wet again, due perhaps to the daily dose of quinine she had been forced to take since her last acute attack.

Linda said, carelessly:

"There's only one way to beat this climate, and that is to take it in homeopathic doses. We've only been here a year and I've been home twice."

Linda was further fortified by the fact that she didn't mind heat. She was blonde and languid by nature, her blood ran slowly and apparently cool. She made herself excessively comfortable, had three native servants and a dour, incessantly complaining but loyal and competent Scotch maid who massaged her, brushed her hair, gave her daily facials and hovered at her dimpled elbow with iced fruit drinks most of the day. "Ross," explained Linda, "is one of those infernal nuisances that no one could get along with and what I personally can't get along without."

She flickered an eye, a large blue eye, at Nevis as they sat together in the screened veranda of the Hayes' rather charming bungalow. "You look wretched," she observed comfortingly, "why don't you get Bill to send you North for a while?"

Nevis refused to admit that they couldn't afford it, and that moreover she was afraid to leave Bill. She thought, "I'm making mountains out of mole hills. If I land in a place and it's hot I want it to be Palm Beach. This is a darned sight better than the other two dumps we were in. Why am I kicking Bill isn't."

He wasn't. His blonde body adjusted itself to the sun, and he adjusted himself to conditions. Leaner, of course, and still malarial he was, nevertheless, happy. He liked Hayes, and Hayes had given him a free hand. He had a number of men under him, he had a car, and a decent house and pleasant society. It was almost like Westlynne he grinned to himself, dropping in at the Hayes' for a cocktail before dinner. He had no kick coming.

During the summer Nevis' mother wrote her that she was not well and that if it were possible she wished Nevis and Bill would come home for a little while. She added: "I know you are reluctant to leave and that perhaps you feel you must consider the expense. Don't. I can well afford this treat for myself." And she enclosed a check which would more than cover round trip passage.

Bill and Nevis discussed it and Nevis' eyes were enormous in her thin, dark face. "Bill can't we go?" He said frowning, "I don't see how we can . . . I've really just started in with Hayes. I can't ask for a holiday now."

She said, and her lips shook, "I suppose not." And folded the letter up and tucked it and the check away. "I'll write," she said, "by next boat. If I just cable, she'll be so disappointed. I'll write and explain instead." But that night he woke to hear her crying pitifully. He put an arm about her and drew her very close . . . "What's the matter, Infant? Do you want to go home so much?"

She said: "I'm being silly. It isn't like Mother to worry about her health. So it worries me, terribly."

Aunt Margaret wrote by the next incoming boat: "Can you come home?" she asked. "If you had remained with the Guayabal people your uncle might have arranged it. But he hasn't any influence with Bill's present outfit." She refrained from adding that Walter Mason was not particularly pleased at Bill's change of position. "I think your mother needs you," she went on to say, "she isn't seriously ill, I assure you of that, but she's homesick for you, Nevis."

"What's the idea of playing the game with Linda Hayes?" said Nevis.

Linda said to Bill, one afternoon, when he dropped in for coffee:

"Why don't you send Nevis home? She looks like the wrath of God. A summer in the mountains would set her up. We'll look after you," promised Linda, from the depths of a great wicker chair, tinkling the ice in her limeade. Bill looked up over the cup of black coffee he held. "Do you really think she's ill?" he asked. "No. But she will be," said Linda.

That night he told Nevis.

"You're going home for a couple of months. No, don't give me any argument. It's the only possible thing to do."

"Bill, I can't leave you!"

"Well, I can't come along, so you'll have to," he said sensibly. "I'll miss you like the devil," he told her, "but—you'll only fret yourself to death staying here and worrying. I'll make arrangements for passage, at once."

In the end, she went, persuaded against her will. As it happened, Laura Jones was sailing also, with two of her children and Nevis made the trip by car to San Juan with them and sailed from there. Della met her in Brooklyn.

"My darling," said Della, brown and bright-eyed and vital as ever, "you look like something the cat brought in."

To their mutual horror Nevis burst into tears. She said:

"I know. Oh, gosh, Della, I'm so happy to be home . . . you don't know."

She spent two days in Westlynne with Della. Fluff Waterford was there, and Frances Carlyle. "Olive?" asked Nevis, a little shakily. She hated to have Olive's slow eyes slide over her faded skin and general dowdiness with that all-observant, withheld verdict. "Oh, Olive's not here," Della told her casually. "Mr. Blanchard bought a sea-going yacht from one of his busted banker friends and they are up in Maine with it. She's got someone in tow—a young actor. She's talking of going on the stage. By the way, Butch Dorgan's wife has made the grade. Opened in a show this spring, has just a bit—walked across the stage and said six words—and she's the hit of the season. You'd be surprised."

On her third day . . . "Della, you don't know what it is to be able to sleep under blankets—" Nevis went on home, stopping to pick up Margaret and Walter Mason on the way and to motor up with them. Walter Mason listened to all she had to say, frowning. He said: "Are you sure you aren't exaggerating?" and she told him hotly: "No, Uncle Walter, I couldn't!" She spoke of Hayes and Bill's job. "I know," she said, "you're sore because he left the other concern. But this is a lot better, more money, more responsibility. Bill never does anything by halves. He wanted to get ahead. He couldn't in the other job. He just wasn't permitted. But it's all right under Mr. Hayes. He's learning. Uncle Walter," she said loyally, "he's keen and," she added, low, "he's game."

Home was—really home. She hadn't known she could be so glad to see the slippery red brick street, the sprawling factories. She found her mother much as ever, a little thinner, perhaps, a little older, in the same wide, cool, comfortable frame house. "Flowers!" said Nevis, walking in the garden the first night. "Flowers!" Walter Mason snorted . . . "Good Lord," he said, "haven't you enough flowers where you come from?"

"Showy ones," she admitted, "lots of them. But not the old-fashioned kind. I tried to grow them, you know. Nothing came up but zinnias . . . I had planned a home garden. Zinnias—well, pretty small and measley and faded looking. I could have cried. I wanted pansies and stock and delphinium and roses and sweet william and snapdragon. I got exactly six zinnias, and that was that."

She was with Bill's father a good deal, and his uncles. His uncle's son, a little younger than Bill, had gone into the business and had made good at it. "There's room for Bill if he wants to come back. Up like a rocket and down like a stick," commented Mr. Lancaster, a short, fat, choleric man with a small mouth and a twinkle in his eye and a permanently ruddy skin. "I thought that Wall street business wouldn't last long. When it was over I begged him to come back here where he belonged. But he's darned stubborn. I suppose he'll stew down in that hole the rest of his life and yours before he'll admit he's made a mistake—two of them, in fact. You don't look well, Nevis. And what's the matter with you and Bill, anyway? No babies? I don't know what this generation is coming to! You would come home if you had any sense, and have a nice house and a big yard and some kids," said Mr. Lancaster sentimentally.

Nevis laughed and squeezed his arm. But her eyes were not laughing, she said:

"Lot of time for that, Father Lancaster. And Bill's doing very well where he is."

Synopsis

Nevis and Bill Lancaster's ideal married life is of short duration. Complications set in when Bill makes a success selling bonds and they live beyond their means. Then Bill meets Olive Blanchard, who tries to win him. Although Bill sees Olive frequently, he loves only Nevis. Nevis, however, believing Bill is having an affair with Olive, encourages the attentions of Harry Carter. News of a friend's divorce makes Nevis realize how near the precipice is her own marriage and she begs Bill to take her away. He secures an inspector's position on a Porto Rican sugar plantation and he and Nevis begin again. Their former harmony is missing, however. One day Bill comes upon Nevis innocently holding hands with Harrison, a sugar expert from the States. A scene follows and Harrison's influence affects Bill in business and society. He blames Nevis. The climate disagrees with Nevis and she is homesick but does not complain.

"THE MOTHER'S FRIEND"

Above picture was published in the late seventies, with the following explanation:

"Mr. Gregory, of the Rochester Chronicle, has invented what he calls 'Gregory's Eureka Spanker,' being an invention calculated to lessen the labor of fathers and mothers in enforcing discipline. The principle is correct, but the machines are more or less of a failure, because of their construction for the purpose designed. The children are suspended face downward, and the mother (or teacher) works the spanking apparatus by foot, or as one turns a coffee mill. A series of fans are arranged to strike the child 30 times per minute, but owing to a fundamental mechanical defect the child is almost invariably led to believe someone is tickling him, and will therefore laugh himself almost to death."

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

A TWO MILLION DOLLAR PAYROLL

What a Great Newspaper Organization Means to Pittsburgh

NO REVIEW of what 1931 has done for Pittsburgh would be complete which omitted the Sun-Telegraph's contributions to the welfare of the city.

The Sun-Telegraph, a daily visitor in the homes of hundreds of thousands, is an important factor in the lives of the people of this community. It furnishes them the news of the day promptly; it provides entertainment and instruction.

During the past year the Sun-Telegraph presented news of vital interest to Pittsburghers in its revelations concerning municipal affairs. It is generally acknowledged that news of this character was never before given the people of Pittsburgh so fully and so fearlessly.

Besides printing the news, the Sun-Telegraph threw itself wholeheartedly into many movements for the benefit of the public. It campaigned, for instance, for the improvement of the public schools, for the relief of the unemployed, and for the abolition of the coal and iron police.

The people of Pittsburgh were furnished the opportunity by the Sun-Telegraph to read some of the most notable books of the year prior to their publication in book form.

During 1931 there were published in the columns of this paper the war memoirs of Gen. Pershing and those of Gen. Foch, the second volume of Ray Stannard Baker's biography of Woodrow Wilson, and numerous works of fiction.

Calvin Coolidge was a regular contributor of editorial comment to the Sun-Telegraph in 1931, and he was but one of many illustrious men and women whose articles were published in this paper.

Some of the Sun-Telegraph's regular features were improved and enlarged during the year, notably the funnies. The comic section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph was expanded into a 16-page magazine, doubling its size.

During the year the Sun-Telegraph acquired radio station WCAE. In the operation of this station the Sun-Telegraph presents not only the best programs of the National Broadcasting Company, but also the finest local artists and features. In addition the Globe-Trotter, the voice of the Hearst Metrotone News and the Sun-Telegraph, gives the news of the moment over WCAE.

* * *

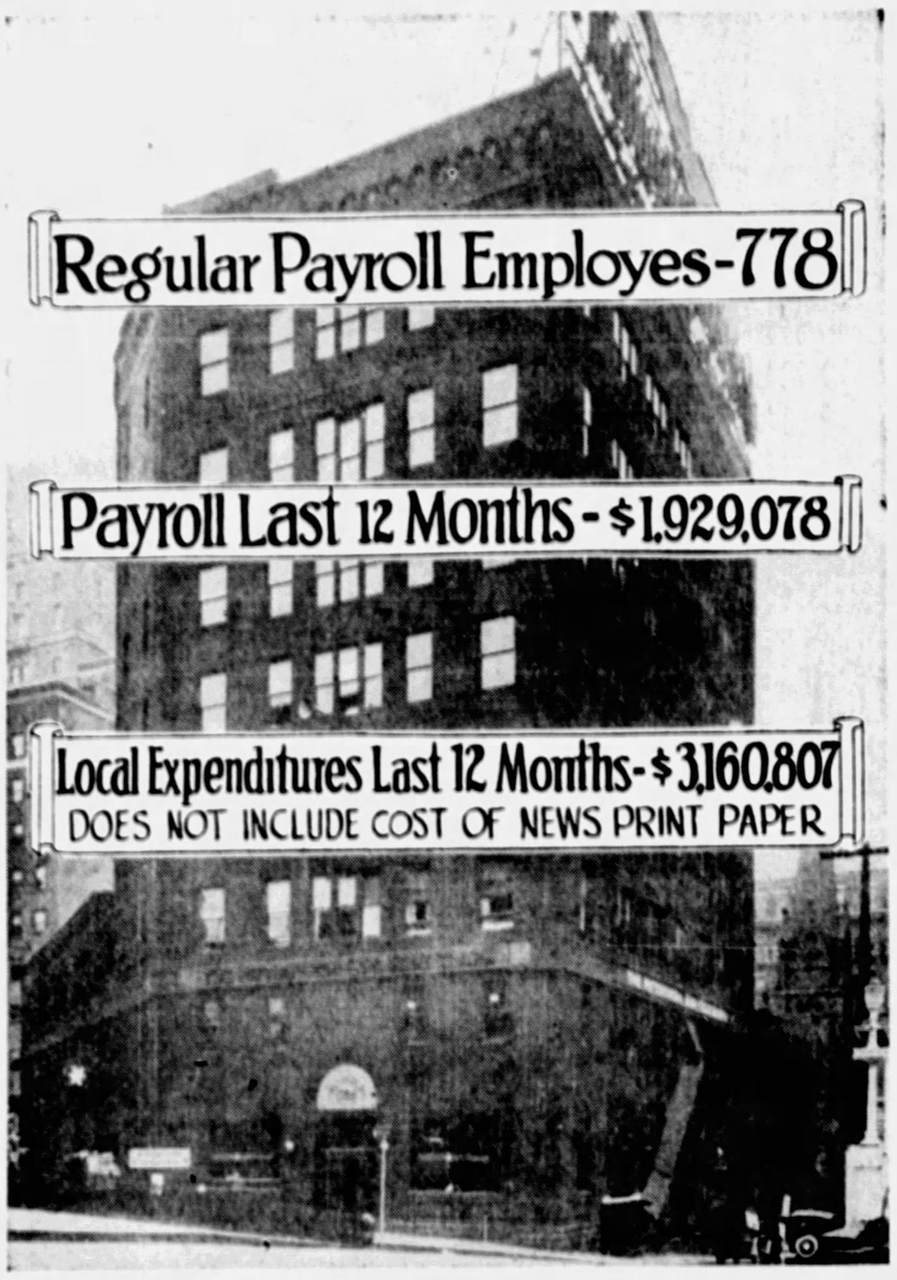
But the Sun-Telegraph has also contributed to the material welfare of the community in a still more tangible way—by paying out millions of dollars to Pittsburghers in wages and salaries and for goods and services bought in Pittsburgh.

The Sun-Telegraph is one of the city's important business enterprises. Its plant occupies an eight-story building of brick and steel on Telegraph Square. It owns and occupies and pays taxes on the building and land and also adjacent property fronting on Grant street, on which a still better plant is to be erected.

Not a year goes by that notable improvements are not made in the Sun-Telegraph's equipment and methods of doing business, and 1931 was no exception.

For example, the library of the editorial department is in process of renovation. A complete new set of fireproof equipment has been installed, in which hundreds of thousands of photographs and records are being filed.

In running this great business huge expenditures are made.



Regular Payroll Employes-778
Payroll Last 12 Months - $1,929,078
Local Expenditures Last 12 Months-$3,160,807
DOES NOT INCLUDE COST OF NEWS PRINT PAPER

This eight-story building on Telegraph Square houses the plant of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. From the paymaster's office in this building $1,928,078 was disbursed during the last 12 months to the 778 employes. The Sun-Telegraph spent $3,160,087 in Pittsburgh in the year.

During the past year the Sun-Telegraph paid $1,929,078—almost $2,000,000—in wages alone.

Most of this money was spent by the employes in the purchase of groceries, meat, clothing, home furnishings and other household and family supplies from Pittsburgh merchants.

Much of it went into rent, into automobiles, radio sets, jewelry, amusements and investments; for taxes, and light and heat. The churches and the welfare organizations received a generous share. Doctors, dentists, ministers, lawyers, plumbers, mechanics, barbers and laborers shared in the distribution. And all IN GREATER PITTSBURGH.

* * *

The Sun-Telegraph has 778 persons regularly on its payrolls, and this figure does not include the extra help employed at rush times.

Every week of the year more than $37,000, the earnings of these men and women, goes out from the Sun-Telegraph into the business and commerce of Greater Pittsburgh.

Hundreds of Pittsburgh families are directly and wholly dependent on the Sun-Telegraph for support. Thousands benefit less directly.

The $1,928,078 paid out by the Sun-Telegraph in wages is far from the entire amount that it spends in Pittsburgh. During the past year the Sun-Telegraph's local expenditures totaled $3,160,807, and that did not include the money spent for news print paper.

The $3,160,807 spent in Pittsburgh went for wages, light, heat, taxes, telephones and for supplies of every sort. There is hardly a business or an industry or a company or an individual in Greater Pittsburgh that has not profited in greater or less degree, directly or indirectly, by the Sun-Telegraph's expenditures here.

The Sun-Telegraph is a Pittsburgh institution, run by Pittsburghers, supported by Pittsburghers, and owing its first duty to Pittsburgh. It is Pittsburgh's part of the great Hearst organization.

* * *

Many of the employes of the Sun-Telegraph were born in Pittsburgh and most of them have lived here for many years. The interests of all are intimately bound up with the interests of Pittsburgh, for it is their home.

Sun-Telegraph employes are well paid. They live in the better sections of the city and suburbs. A large proportion own their homes. A great many are stockholders in the Hearst organization.

They demand goods of fine quality and do not balk at the price. Sun-Telegraph employes have accounts in every first-class store in Pittsburgh. Their credit is good, for they pay their bills promptly.

They support the churches, the schools and the universities. They have deposits in the local banks and shares in the local building and loan associations.

They are proud of Pittsburgh, of its history and institutions. They strive constantly, because of their civic pride, to advance the welfare of the city. They will be found taking an active part in every movement for civic betterment.

* * *

The Sun-Telegraph, like all the other Hearst newspapers, is a permanent institution dedicated to the diffusion of truth and the service of the public.

The Sun-Telegraph has served Pittsburgh during 1931 with all its heart and soul and strength. It will continue to serve Pittsburgh.

As the Sun-Telegraph progresses and prospers Pittsburgh will share in its progress and prosperity.

A New Deal

A Suggestion For the Incoming Public Officials—Brief Comment on Local News

Some of the new county officials were sworn in Thursday, the oath is being administered to others today, and the new County Commissioners and County Treasurer will be inducted into office on Monday. The Sun-Telegraph suggests as a New Year's resolution for all of them that they place the interests of the people above those of any individual.

The new County Commissioners will be confronted with the proposal that the Wabash Tunnel and Bridge be purchased and utilized for vehicular traffic. The County Planning Commission has approved the project by a vote of 3 to 2. Notwithstanding this indorsement the Commissioners should give a hearing to the opponents of the plan.

With Federal authorities now actively interested in the investigation of local bomb outrages as the result of the discovery that one of the infernal machines in the Easton tragedy was addressed to the Italian vice consul here, whose residence was bombed two months ago, the prospect of putting the perpetrators of some of these crimes in the penitentiary has become brighter.

The New Year starts with numerous new jobs available for the unemployed. The Water Power and Resources Board is ready to hire 1,000 men on the Pymatuning Reservoir project. Even more encouraging are the plans of small communities to help their unemployed. There is Coraopolis, for example, beginning street improvements which will furnish work for 30 men.

The Sunday Sun-Telegraph begins the New Year with an attractive issue. The Gravure Section tomorrow will be notable for a photograph of six charming Pittsburgh girls snapped while engaged in an artistic dance. There is a page of pictures of the stars of radio station WCAE and another of interesting babies. The "Remember" page offers photographs of famous old bicycle riders.

The American Weekly Magazine Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will present tomorrow another installment of the fascinating story of the race of supermen who are thought to have lived on the earth more than 20,000 years ago. Another article that will be found entertaining has to do with a show, "Jailbird Follies," staged by women inmates of Auburn Prison.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

We get mad at these cock-sure modern youngsters who laugh at our old-fashioned, laborious methods and who think that they can KNOW anything, DO anything, and BE anything without half trying.

BUT WHY SHOULDN'T THEY FEEL THAT WAY?

All their lives they have been seeing things happen without any effort on their part. Where you and I, and our folks before us, had to work like blazes for everything we had, this Machine Age generation has gotten everything it wanted by pushing a button or pressing a lever. So why blame the kid if he prefers buttons to backaches?

Take, for instance, this matter of youthful conceit and impatience. Young Bill and Bessie, feeling that they're able to Run The Whole Show at 20 . . . then blowing up and blaming everybody but themselves when miracles don't happen pronto . . . how disgusted we get with them! And with what irritating superiority we point out to them the fact that we, too, were impatient at their age—just as restless and rebellious as they can possibly be—but we got over it. We learned to control ourselves. THEN WHY CAN'T THEY?

Wonderful sale talk. But let's quit handing ourselves so many wreaths, Neighbor, and face a few facts. We were impatient and we did get over it, way back there in 1883. But how and why?

BECAUSE WE HAD TO—THAT'S WHY.

Every day, in a thousand ways, we had our impatience and our conceit whammed out of us. Remember those wintery mornings when we stood around shivery and blue with "goose pimples?" Could we get warm by pressing a button to turn on a furnace or phoning down to the janitor to rustle up some more heat? No, we couldn't. We had to split our own kindling—make our fire—and endure our chattering teeth while we did so.

Remember that first job you had away from home . . . . how homesick you got . . . . how you longed to hear Ma's voice? Could you jump into a roadster and get home in a couple of hours, or step into the nearest drug store and ring up? No, you couldn't. You had to stick it out.

SO WE LEARNED ABOUT PATIENCE AND SELF-CONTROL FROM THAT.

And now we're pretending that we did it all ourselves—when the truth is we'd have ducked hardship just as fast as these youngsters do if we'd had a chance. We have our nerve.

The kids are wrong, of course. They can't outsmart Life any more than we could. But it isn't their fault that they think they can.

Moreover, our live-wire salesmen, our clever ads, have taught them to despise people who don't get Quick Results . . . taught them to sneer at farmers who use plows instead of tractors, at wives who bake their own bread when they might buy it better and cheaper at the grocery.

THEN WHY SHOULDN'T THEY THINK THAT CHARACTER CAN ALSO COME READY MADE . . . THAT POWER CAN BE ACHIEVED BY LEARNING A BUNCH OF TRICK GESTURES AND A LINE OF WISE CRACKS?

Of course it can't. It's as hard to be strong and loving and wise and good in 1932 as it was in 1883. It takes as much time and machines don't do a bit of good. But you've got to prove that to the Machine Age youngster. And you'll never prove it by losing your temper and calling him a Bad Egg.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Lovers—And Others

The most UNinteresting person in the world: The one over whom you made such a fool of yourself last summer.

* * *

A man always understands what a woman means, until he discovers that she means exactly what she says. And that gets him all mixed up.

Most love is based on a mutual misunderstanding—and lasts until one or the other discovers his or her mistake.

* * *

As long as she can think of his faults as "just his little idiosyncracies" and he can think of her failings as "her funny little ways," their love is not yet dead.

* * *

A woman's arguments merely bore a man, but her stony silence galvanizes him into attention. Somehow, in spite of his lack of intuition, he has a sub-conscious premonition that her love is dead when she is too weary and disinterested to "answer back."

* * *

A man never quite realizes how much he values an umbrella—or a woman—until he sees some other man calmly walking off with it—or her.

* * *

Many a married woman spends her life acting as "umpire" between her husband and her mother—and, in return, receives from both of them all the tenderness and gratitude that are bestowed upon an umpire.

It would take all the joy out of a girl's life if she could know how quickly the hearts that she "broke," last summer, had sprung right back into working condition again.

* * *

What no woman can understand is that a man may love her with blind devotion—yet never be so blind that he can refrain from staring at a prettier pair of exposed shoulders.

Isn't It So?

No man is too dull to be a bore.

The less some alleged statesmen have to say, the more they say it.

It is impossible to fish without a hook or learn to read without a book.

A girl is "as pretty as a picture," considering how well she is painted, if any.

Experience teaches that a fellow can get in pretty deep without owning a diving suit.

Text for Today

And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.—Genesis, xxviii:22.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Purely personal piffle: Ridged plates with compartments for meat, spinach, potatoes, etc., take my appetite. The vulgar display of jewels at the opera this season struck me as atrocious taste. I'd like someone to play Kreisler's "Chanson Veinnois" in my last moments.

People who write: "I can tell by your stuff you are good natured," are usually disappointed. And I'm annoyed when anyone helps me on with my overcoat. Sophie Breslau is my favorite contralto. Zero in music is the Scotch bagpipe. I have received more than 1,000 love letters from an unknown woman signed "Buddy."

Mrs. Arthur S. Roche has the most unusual of hairbobs. I laughed more at Ed Wynn's play than any other this season. I admit knowing people whether I do or not. Saves time. As a young man I use to darken my fingers with walnut stain to give impression of being a terrible cigaret fiend.

Nobody can spout an epigram like Alexander Woollcott. The best ice cream to my notion is the coffee flavored at Schrafft's. I pronounce "subtle" two ways and cannot spell "Champs Elysees" without looking it up. All the cash I could raise was recently put into an annuity for my wife. No more "securities!"

The most comfortable theater seats in town are at the Maxine Elliott. A great doctor once told me 80 per cent of his prescriptions were unmedicated sugar pellets. I walk three miles a day, rain or shine, and have for five years. No professional photographer touches that amateur Robert H. Davis.

I wince when big catches are hauled out in deep sea fishing pictures. Grantland Rice is the most modest newspaperman I ever met. The prettiest feminine handwriting and most magnificent stationery come from army posts. I never saw Arthur Brisbane in the flesh.

During the past year I received four letters on the same day and read of the passing of the writers in newspapers. My Boston dart out his tongue from side to side like a snake when you touch a certain spot in the middle of his back. Lilyan Tashman always looks different to me in real life.

The most expert salesman ever encountered is Vash Young—who never suggests a sale. My favorite handkerchief is a yard wide white mull put out by Charvet in Paris. I have never been inside a college or on a college campus. I enjoy watching dancers but never dance.

Francine Larimore is a finished and charming actress but her accentuated pallor detracts. Buffet dinners give me the mud-stunkies—wandering around a plate looking for food and feeling silly.

My next is my 48th birthday. I have a couple of fairly good teeth, a ravenous appetite and sleep like a top. Nothing depresses me more than an expensive theatrical production on opening night. The most bizarre apartment I ever saw was the late Ralph Barton's in the rue Nicolet, Paris. I often drink a glass of cream for breakfast.

I never heard Frank Fay, Phil Baker and Lou Holtz say anything slightly amusing on stage. Nor do I remember attending a first night not attended by A. Reuben or Dr. Jerome Wagner. Only one man irritates me on sight. A motion picture executive. And what I know about that being! I pronounce there, "thair."

Alone at dusk, I frequently feel so sorry for myself I get a lump in my throat. I wear sox with rubber band tops and have no garter trouble. The most infectious laugh is Otis Raston's. I never met anybody who read all the books in the five foot shelf. The best dessert in the world is Ekmek Kadief served in Armenian restaurants. I can always run a temperature over Lenore Ulric as a shady lady.

I like silent pictures best without Edwin Booth. My favorite orchestra leader is Frank Tours. My admiration for Mary Pickford fluttered around zero, but jumped to 100 per cent at a recent speech for the unemployed. But I still think Fairbanks is a nimble acrobat. I always ask Percy Hammond when I see him if he enjoys the theater. Some day he will knock my head off. And then, goody, goody, there will be no more of this.
